'Some Casualties'

By Sidney J. Williams.
United Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 6.—A shakeup in the British Navy's High Command to cope with Germany's destruction of British shipping was believed imminent tonight after a fierce sea battle in the South Atlantic between the merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle and a disguised Nazi sea raider.

The 20,122-ton Carnarvon Castle routed the German raider, disguised as a merchantman, and sent it fleeing northward "at high speed" in the battle, apparently fought within the American neutrality zone, the admiralty said.

Some damage and casualties aboard the Carnarvon Castle, once called "the most luxurious motorship in the world," were reported by the admiralty. The battle was waged at long-range about 700 miles northeast of Montevideo, Uruguay, and close to the main trade route between Buenos Aires and the British Isles.

Hospital Prepared

Indications that a large number of men may have been killed or wounded aboard the British auxiliary cruiser were seen in a Montevideo dispatch saying that the British hospital there was preparing to care for the casualties. The Carnarvon Castle is expected to enter Montevideo about noon Saturday, it was reported, and is "considerably damaged."

The South Atlantic sea battle, along one of Britain's most vital commerce routes, coincided with mounting indications and demands that the naval high command be shaken up to put "new vigor" into Britain's campaign against U-boats and other commerce raiders.

[An unconfirmed report was heard in Mexico City, according to an International News Service dispatch, that British cruisers had captured the German steamers Rhein and Idarwald off Cuba. These ships left Vera Cruz Sunday in an attempt to run the British blockade.]

Badoglio Loses Army Command

Badoglio Opposed Greek Campaign; Replaced by More Tractable General

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the victor of Vittorio Veneto, which capped Austria's defeat in the World War, and the conqueror of Abyssinia in 1936, has resigned as Italy's chief of staff because Italy started the Greek campaign against his advice, it was said in well-informed circles here yesterday.

The whole general staff of the Italian army, it was added, shared Badoglio's view that the Greek war was untimely and badly prepared. But Mussolini decided to go ahead in spite of the opinion of military experts.

Information obtained here from Italy indicates that Badoglio offered his resignation to the King on two previous occasions since the beginning of the Greek war, but Victor Emmanuel refused to accept it.

As in the case of the Ethiopian war, when Badoglio was called to straighten out a difficult situation in the fall of 1935, he pointed out to Mussolini last October, that, if war were undertaken, it should be organized well. There had been no real preparation for the Greek campaign in his opinion, and it was started at a bad season, when passes in the mountains are covered with snow.

Duce Relied on Diplomats

Italian military circles, it is understood here, had pointed out to Il Duce the scarcity of Italy's military supplies and the difficulty of sending them to Albania while Italy was engaged in the Libyan campaign. But Mussolini relied on diplomatic reports from Athens, which said that the Greek government, headed by Gen. Metaxas, a dictator himself, would not attempt resistance. Emanuele Grazi, the Italian minister in Athens who sent in such reports, is in Rome today, with his diplomatic career abruptly ended.

It was reported here that Badoglio refused to take over the command of Italy's army in Albania, since his advice had not been listened to and the campaign had been undertaken without assuring sufficient supplies. He had asked the King to relieve him as chief of staff, but the King had begged him to remain at his post. It is believed probable now that Mussolini has insisted to the King that Badoglio be replaced by a "more dynamic" high officer.

Rome Says Marshal Quit 'at Own Request'

By the Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 6.—Premier Mussolini accepted today the resignation of "Italy's Hindenburg," 69-year-old Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the general staff before and after Fascism, and replaced him with a tested lieutenant upon whom he counts to "break the back" of Greece.

The new chief is Gen. Ugo Cavallero, nine years Badoglio's junior, recently comparatively inactive.

No reason was given for the resignation of the bald, somewhat pudgy Badoglio, other than that it was "at his own request." Foreign circles were not too surprised, however, after the criticism leveled at the marshal's conduct of the Greek campaign.

Greeks Enter Porto Edda In Triumph

Argirocastro Afire And Due to Fall At Any Moment

Athens, Dec. 6.—Another smashing Greek success was announced today—the capture of Santi Quaranta, or, as Fascist Italy was pleased to call it, Porto Edda, after Premier Mussolini's daughter Countess Ciano.

Actually the fall of this ramshackle haven is less significant than the victories achieved by Greek arms on preceding days, but it represents a definite accomplishment easily registered in the popular mind, firing the imagination.

Henceforth, this town on the west coast of Albania almost opposite Corfu will be known by its Greek name of Santi Quaranta, which commemorates the martyrdom of 40 saints in the days of another Roman empire—that of the Caesars.

Greek soldiers testify that they have come upon tanks, armored cars and motorcycles all in perfect condition with gasoline in the tanks and enough oil for many kilometers.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Western Union Cable Company announced its communications with London were restored tonight at 9:30 (E. S. T.) after an interruption of 6 hours and 15 minutes.

"Trouble" in the vicinity of Bristol in the land line section between the main cable office at Penzance on the southwestern tip of England and London, was the reason for the interrupted service, the company said.

London dispatches at the time told of a heavy air raid on an unidentified "Southwest" English city.

Bomber Bearing Senora Davila To Chile Stops Off at Miami

MERCY FLIGHT—Senora Davila in the machine-gun "blister" of the Army bomber for the flight to Chile. Senor Davila stands beside her

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 6.—A giant Army bomber making an unprecedented mercy flight to Chile at the personal direction of President Roosevelt arrived here at 7:40 p. m. (E. S. T.) for an overnight stay.

Senora Carlos Davila, for whom physicians prescribed the climate of her homeland in treatment of a dangerous illness, was reported to have rested well during the first leg of the flight—from New York.

With her husband, former President of Chile, and other members of the party she spent tonight at a Miami hotel. The plane will leave at 8 a. m. (E. S. T.) for Panama City.

As the huge plane winged southward, Senora Davila sent this radio message to President Roosevelt, cruising in the Caribbean:

"Flying down to my country and, I hope, to health, I wish to express my deepest gratitude to the President of the United States, who made this trip possible."

She dictated it from the portable bed placed in a space left vacant by the removal of the bomb racks.

Physicians decided Senora Davila, who has undergone two operations, would have a chance for recovery if she could be speedily carried to the dry climate of Chile.

The flying sick-room took off at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) from ice-encrusted Mitchel Field for the sunny Chilean capital, Santiago, on a precedent-shattering flight. It was the first time the United States Army had permitted a civilian or a woman to fly in a military plane to a foreign country.

Reclining chairs were placed in the forward part of the plane and portable beds in the rear where sickroom accoutrements had been provided Nurse Olympia Fumigale.

Commanding the flight, Maj. Hilbert W. Wittkop, of the Army Air Corps, banned night flying and ordered overnight stops

U. S. Protests To Germany In Deegan Case

Arrest of Embassy Clerk Violates Diplomatic Immunity

The United States has energetically protested to Germany against detention of Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, receptionist at the United States Embassy in Paris, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Deegan was reported from Vichy, France, to have been accused of conniving in the escape of British officers from occupied France, but State Department officials here are without word as to the reason for her detention.

Whether or not charges have been or ever are placed against her by the German secret police (Gestapo) or the military authorities, it was pointed out yesterday that Mrs. Deegan's arrest violates the diplomatic immunity to which she is entitled by reason of her Embassy employment even though Paris is under a military government.

A widow, with three young sons to support, is too ill to go on with her work for the next few months. A man recovering from an illness needs help for his family of four, before he can attempt to find work again.

The Post's fund for the 50 neediest families is expected to help these two homes and others to independence again as a Christmas gift from its readers.

Scores have discovered the satisfaction of putting a gift to the Neediest Families Fund near the top of their Christmas list. Each mail brings evidence that the numbers will grow into the hundreds. Yet, many contributions are needed to relieve the emergencies.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general, Pan American Union, wrote yesterday: "The Washington Post is rendering a great service to this community in providing for the neediest families. I deem it a privilege to make a contribution which I am inclosing."

Readers may better visualize potentialities of their gifts, through results in a typical family which was aided last year by The Post's fund.

Britain and U. S. Plan 'Belt-line' Production Of Merchant Vessels

Cost Estimate On Two-Ocean Navy Boosted a Billion To $7,700,000,000

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Government sources disclosed last night that the cost of the "two-ocean Navy" now building will run at least $1,000,000,000 more than was officially estimated last summer.

The Defense Commission, in a statement, fixed the cost of completing the naval program at $7,700,000,000, a total which one naval official described as "conservative." Barely five months ago, the Navy Department estimated the cost of the shipbuilding program, including ships under construction, at $6,560,000,000.

Neither totals include the cost of expanding the naval air arm, then placed at $2,250,000,000, or of building a chain of Atlantic naval bases on the sites acquired from Great Britain.

Not Owing to Labor Costs

Officials declared the increase is not due in any important degree to rising labor and material costs, a factor that is expected to run the cost of building new Army posts and naval stations some 20 to 25 per cent above the estimated total of $2,000,000,000.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the naval bureau of ships, said that while rising costs of labor and materials are "anticipated" they have not figured importantly as yet. A definite rise in wages and raw products would raise the cost of the naval program still higher.

Main reason for the huge upward scalings of the expected cost of the naval program, other officials said, lies in the heavy expenditures incidental to the acquisition and conversion of additional auxiliary ships and because the earlier estimates were too low.

The latter were based on the average costs of building ships in the past, and these have not held in the new program. New types of war vessels are being constructed which cost more than older vessels of similar size. Also, where in the past awards went to the low bidders, now with every shipyard pressed into service, the high bidders of the past also received contracts.

New type cruisers, aircraft carriers and auxiliary ships, particularly, will cost more to build than earlier ships in these categories.

A naval official said the estimate furnished Congress last summer as to the cost of the "two-ocean Navy" did not include all of the present auxiliary ship program. The purchase and alteration of merchant ships to naval use has been stepped up greatly recently, it was stated, "due to the immediate world situation."

No Allowance for New Yards

This $6,560,000,000 estimate also did not include an allowance of $250,000,000 for new shipbuilding facilities. The Defense Commission statement did not make clear whether or not its $7,700,000,000 total provided for the cost of such facilities, but officials pointed out that even if it did, the discrepancy between the two estimates was more than $1,000,000,000, as sizable payments have been made to shipbuilders in the last five months.

The Defense Commission said

Morgenthau Calls For Balance Sheet At Preliminary Talk

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The British undersecretary of treasury, Sir Frederick Phillips, last night started preparation of a balance sheet on the state of Britain's resources available for war purchases here.

Important decisions on British aid policy hinged on the showing of the Whitehall official, who conferred for 73 minutes with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday.

Foremost question was Britain's ability to pay cash for contemplated war purchases in this country.

Likewise to be determined was how far England will be forced to liquidate assets before this Government considers financial aid.

Policy Not Discussed

Yesterday's conference dealt only with "a state of facts" and no questions of policy arose, Sir Frederick later told reporters.

He will return to the Treasury Monday to present "a balance sheet on the state of our resources and the

200 Ships a Year To Slide Down Ways At Two Huge Yards In This Country

By George Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

The United States and Great Britain agreed at a secret conference last night on a mass production plan to meet the British need for merchant ships—item No. 2 on the empire's urgent "munitions, ships and money" shopping list.

Officials of the two nations agreed in principle that shipyards will be built in the United States to assemble freighters on a "belt-line" basis.

Taking advantage of latest mass-production methods, the ships will be little more than "pointed boxes," as one official put it, but they are just what Britain needs to fight the Nazi air and submarine counter-blockade.

The meeting brought together envoys of the British ministry of shipping and high American Treasury and shipping officials.

Two Yards Planned

Under the plan at least two shipyards for British use will be constructed at an estimated cost of $10,000,000.

Though the location of actual sites could not be disclosed, it was understood that Portland, Oreg., Baltimore and New Orleans were under consideration.

A tentative agreement calls for the new facilities to be paid for eventually by Great Britain, but the initial cost may be financed in this country.

Raising the funds for the initial cost may play a part in the current discussions between Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Sir Frederick Phillips, British treasury undersecretary.

One blueprint calls for building a mammoth yard of 23 ways that could build that number of ships simultaneously.

Such a yard could turn out 50 ships the first year and 100 ships a year thereafter.

Parts of the ships, such as plates, engines, doors, electrical equipment and deck fittings would be built in manufacturing centers scattered across the American Continent.

These parts would then be shipped to the water's edge assembly plant and fitted together.

Designs to Be Few

Designs for the vessels will be rigidly standardized. It was believed that not more than two or—at the outside—three designs would be used.

The vessels would displace about 10,000 tons each.

The plan, which makes American shores a supply base for the British merchant marine, was made necessary by the increasingly large toll that is being taken by the German sea campaign.

British average weekly shipping losses since the fall of France are at a rate of 4,700,000 tons a year, informed sources said, and the rate is steadily rising.

A Long Term Plan

This new plan is of a long-range nature. It is not expected to help the British supply situation for at least a year, the time needed for the shipyards to be built and placed in operation.

To take care of short-term needs, British officials are buying up all the American tonnage they can find.

The Maritime Commission still has 63 vessels from its laid-up fleet, remnants of the "bridge of ships" that supplied the allied armies in Europe in 1917 and 1918.

British shipyards, it was explained, would be ample to care for the Empire's ship needs—if there were no Luftwaffe.

Senate Aide Denounces Use Of Dictograph in 'Sniper' Case

The admission of Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, that a dictograph was used in the recent "sniper" investigation brought angry denunciation of the incident yesterday from counsel of a Senate investigating committee.

"The people and the bar of the City of Washington ought to know whether this is a general practice of the police," asserted William P. Maloney, counsel for the Senate committee inquiring into wire-tapping.

Asserting that he intended to call Thompson and others to the stand at hearings Wednesday, Maloney excoriated the use of a dictograph as "the most outrageous violation of the rights of a man accused of crime that I've ever heard of."

Employment of the dictograph, first revealed by The Post November 29, was admitted by Thompson in a statement to newspapermen. He said the instrument was installed to listen to a conversation between an informer and John E. Eklund, who is under indictment for the murder of three colored men.

However, Thompson said, the dictograph was still "hooked up" while Eklund talked to his attorney. It was this phase of the case that particularly aroused Maloney, but Thompson maintained that "nothing of importance" was learned during the conversation between Eklund and his lawyer.

Asserting that the right of privacy in talks between attorney and client was embedded in the Constitution, the Senate Committee counsel declared he would call to the stand next week not only

'Such Inadequate Words'

Duke, in Surprise Radio Talk, Thanks Americans for War Aid

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—The Duke of Windsor, in an unscheduled radio speech tonight from Nassau, the Bahamas, expressed thanks for "all that many Americans are doing toward relieving the sufferings of those directly and indirectly engaged in this war."

"I feel I can assure those open-hearted and understanding folks that such inadequate words as gratitude and appreciation could not in any way describe the encouragement that their various efforts must be bringing to the hearts of the people of Great Britain at the present time," he said.

He said it would be impossible for him to mention all the organizations that had helped relieve suffering abroad, but made special mention of "one institution that has outstanding qualifications for taking care of anyone's contributions, either money in kind or in factual status, and is sheering its direction to places where it is most needed.

"I mean the Red Cross."

The Duchess was beside him as he spoke, he said, adding:

"As an American she asks me to say how much pride and sympathetic interest she takes in these friendly activities and demonstrations of good will on the part of so many of her countrymen and countrywomen."

The Duke and Duchess were guests of honor at a broadcast on which Robert Tapscott and Wilbert Widdicombe, two British sailors who drifted 71 days in an open boat after their ship was sunk by a raider, told of the experience.

Town in Southwest England Blasted

Nazis Bomb It Hour After Hour; Other Cities Raided

By Frank R. Kelley

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London (Saturday), Dec. 7.—While a waxing moon bathed London in its light last night, German raiders swarmed over a city in southwestern England which has been attacked before and, hour after hour pelted it with fire bombs and explosives.

They started several fires and used them as beacons for indiscriminate bombing of the central area. Early reports said a hospital, three trains and a station had been hit.

Other raiding forces hammered at a city on the south coast. The Luftwaffe's targets last night also included a large industrial city in the western Midlands which has been lashed recently, and a town on the east coast of England.

London had an alarm for an hour and a half but the all clear came not long after dinner and for the first time since July those who cared to stay out on a crisp, wintry evening, were able to walk through the city and savor its moon-lit beauty without worrying about where the next bomb might land.

Germans Stay at Home

In daylight, with a westerly wind of gale force whipping across southern England, the Germans stayed at home. Small groups of planes ventured across the southeast coast at several points but were intercepted a few miles inland by British fighters, which forced them to turn back over the Channel.

A lone Nazi placed a few bombs in a town on the east coast, damaging dwellings. No one was hurt. Enemy planes were reported in the vicinity of Liverpool in the afternoon but no bombs were dropped.

In attacking a southcoast city, named by the Germans as Portsmouth, relays of planes came over and employed the same technique as at Coventry, Birmingham, Bristol, Liverpool and Southampton. The early visitors unloaded flares and incendiaries and started fires. A fierce gun barrage drove off many of the planes.

Later, low-flying bombers broke through and inflicted much damage on the city with high explosives and fire bombs. According to the air ministry a church, houses, shops and other buildings were damaged.

The Germans scored a direct hit on a motion picture theater where an audience of 300 was watching a film. About 50 persons, of whom three were missing yesterday, were trapped, and the operator, at the back of the balcony, was killed. Nearby a bomb hit a large apartment house and business premises.

Two Hospitals Set Afire

Two of the city's hospitals were struck and set afire. A shower of incendiaries fell on one and fire broke out in the rafters of a nurses' home. No one was injured. Nurses formed a line and passed buckets of water to the top of the three-story wing which housed them.

At the second hospital two wings were hit by incendiaries but the fires were quickly extinguished.

Elsewhere in the city, 13-year-old Peggy Vyse, after being trapped for 14 hours in a cellar with her dead mother, a sister and two brothers, was rescued yesterday afternoon, suffering only from slight bruises. A truck driver tunneled through blazing wreckage of Peggy's home and brought her out.

Nelson Shaken Up

By permission of the British censor it may now be disclosed that bombs have landed in the grounds of Windsor Castle, wrecked No. 145 Piccadilly, residence of the King and Queen when they were the Duke and Duchess of York; damaged No. 3 Belgrave Square, the former home of the Duke and Duchess of Kent; scooped a rooftop corner from the Ritz Hotel, plumped into Hyde Park near the statue of Peter Pan, scourged Savile Row, the haunt of men's tailors; shook Nelson on his perch in Trafalgar Square, and have fallen on the Thames embankment, alongside Cleopatra's Needle, the obelisk which still bears scars from a Zeppelin bomb in the last war.

Rome Radio Affair

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—Bad weather forced cancellation of wide bombing operations over Germany today and tonight. (The Germans said only one British plane appeared over Germany in the night.)

However, Reuters (British news agency) announced last night that the Rome medium wave radio had gone off the air at 9:37 p. m. (3:37 p. m. E. S. T.) and the Bremen Germany radio at 6:40 p. m. (12:40 p. m. E. S. T.).

When a wireless station falls silent it usually means that hostile air radiers are about. Rome has had only a few and minor air alarms since Italy entered the war.

10,000 From U. S. Volunteer in Canada

7% of Air Force From Below Border, Official Reveals

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Dec. 6.—Leonard W. Brockington, counselor to the War Committee of the Canadian Cabinet at Ottawa, told the closing session of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel today that 10,000 citizens of the United States have volunteered for training in the Royal Air Force in Canada since last May.

There are 36,000 now traning in the Canadian air force in Canada under the commonwealth air training program, he went on, and seven per cent of the gunners, pilots and bombardiers are citizens of the United States, the others being Canadians and French-Canadians, English, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, Australians, New Zealanders, and men from the Argentine and the Straits Settlements.

"These citizens of the United States," he went on, "have come to help us as volunteers, of their own free will, paying their own traveling expenses, some of them hitch-hiking. They come from all over the country, from the factories of Detroit to the plains of Texas, and they are all full of the spirit of adventure. As many as 300 volunteered on one day, October 4, and every day since they have presented themselves at the border to apply for the air force."

Many U. S. Teachers

Brockington said that by the end of 1941 Canada would be sending pilots, observers and gunners "by the tens of thousands" to England to reinforce the Royal Air Force. The training program, he said, now has 50 flying fields and will have 100. It will cost $600,000,000, of which Canada will contribute $360,000,000, he said.

In addition to the student pilots, he continued, "hundreds" of experienced pilots from the United States are acting as instructors in the Royal Canadian Air Force and in the private Canadian airplane companies cooperating in the training program.

Besides Canadian pilots serving with the Royal Air Force, he went on, the Royal Canadian Air Force itself has sent two squadrons overseas, which have brought down 71 enemy planes.

Although her aviation effort will be Canada's "greatest contribution toward winning the war, as the Royal Air Force will probably be the chief weapon of victory," Brockington said, "Canada at war" also has 167,000 on active service in the army, with a reserve of 100,000, now increasing at the rate of 30,000 a month, and has sent 56,000 overseas. Her troops have been supplied with modern mechanized equipment, he added.

Navy Greatly Expanded

The Canadian navy, he continued, has been increased from 1,700 men and 15 ships before the war to 13,000 men and 115 ships, soon to be increased to 20,000 men and 200 ships, and is engaged in convoy service, antisubmarine work, patrol duty off Newfoundland and the West Indies, and destroyer service off England.

Brockington said Canada was expanding her industries to produce munitions for Britain, not only intensifying production of old products but building new factories to turn out entirely new products.

"Her war effort is costing Canada $80,000,000 a month, as of September, he went on, but the country is determined "to stand as far as possible on our own feet and pay our own way," through taxation, denial of luxuries, and domestic borrowing, and "without any method of inflation."

British Call for Shake-up in Navy

the protection of sea routes and the acquisition of new tonnage has become Britain's most urgent problem—more acute than the German aerial "blitz" against Britain.

Parliament and the press is demanding more energetic counter measures and newspapers today forecast a shakeup which would replace Sir Dudley Pound as commander in chief. A younger man probably will be given the post.

A. J. Cummings, writer in the News-Chronicle, said:

"There are very able naval officers who are severely critical of what they deem to be stereotyped, out-of-date and incorrect admiralty methods for mastering the sea menace.

"Many of them think the time has come, when Sir Dudley Pound should go into honorable retirement and thereby enable A. V. Alexander, as first sea lord, to choose an appropriate successor."

A minor shakeup was brought about several weeks ago when Admiral John C. Tovey was appointed commander in chief of the British home fleet, succeeding Admiral Sir Charles Forbes.

News of Fight Meager

Information regarding the battle between the Carnarvon Castle and the Nazi raider was meager.

It was not learned what damage the Nazi raider suffered because "she last was reported steaming north at high speed away from the scene of action," the admiralty said.

The battle, during which there was "heavy firing" as the British cruiser chased her enemy, was waged not far from the scene of the battle last December 18 which resulted in the scuttling of the German pocket battleship Graf Spee outside Montevideo harbor.

(In Berlin, the German high command in its announcement of the battle said that a German "auxiliary cruiser" operating in the South Atlantic had engaged and seriously damaged the British cruiser.

(The high command also reported the sinking of four more British merchant ships, totaling 13,300 tons, by one U-boat.)

The admiralty's communique described the disguised German raider as having been a heavily armed vessel of "considerable speed" which refused to accept a close-range battle.

The British cruiser, commanded by Capt. H. N. M. Hardy, could not get close enough, it was said, to deliver a death blow or determine what damage had been inflicted.

Several Nazi sea raiders have been reported in action at widely separated points in the North and South Atlantic recently, cooperating with U-boats in attacks on convoys.

Raider Is Speedy

The speed of the Nazi raider was indicated by the fact that the Carnarvon Castle, unless crippled by enemy action, was capable of a speed of about 20 knots.

Britain's armed auxiliary cruisers—for the most part converted passenger liners—are said to be armed with guns capable of a range of 20,000 yards making it possible that the encounter between the Carnarvon Castle and the raiders occurred at a range of 7 to 10 miles.

Before being taken over by the admiralty and armed, the Carnarvon Castle, built in Belfast, operated in the service of the Union Castle Mail and Steamship Co. and during her maiden voyage in July, 1926 was described as "the most luxurious motorship in the world."

In September of 1938, the Carnarvon Castle made a record-breaking trip from England to Capetown in 12 days, 18 hours and 38 minutes.

Battle a "Stern Chase"

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 6 (AP). The 20,122-ton British armed merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle, steaming here to repair the damage done her in a South Atlantic sea battle with a masked German raider, broke her radio silence briefly tonight to report that the Nazi's superior speed had enabled her to escape after "a stern chase."

The message added that the action had been at long range and that the Britisher had expended "considerable ammunition." Then the wireless fell silent without having mentioned the extent of the vessel's damage or casualties.

Cavallero Gets Badoglio's Post

said recently that Italian victory in Greece was certain, despite "some improvidence and untimeliness on the part of the head of the general staff."

The Italian reverses have been laid in some quarters to overconfidence and lack of preparation.

Observers believe Cavallero will carry out faithfully the orders of Il Duce, who has declared he will "break the back of Greece" if it takes a year.

A further reorganization of the forces in Albania may first be expected from this general, who helped Mussolini make over the Italian military machine in 1925. Many, however, expect that the Italian troops in Albania will wait until after the New Year before launching another major offensive, for there is nothing to indicate that their reinforcement with masses of fresh troops and equipment has reached its peak.

However, the men of Gen. Ubaldo Soddu are sure to exert every effort to hold back the Greeks for the next few weeks, hoping meantime that the Greek supply lines through the snow-packed mountain passes will become over-extended.

Today's Italian war bulletin from the Italian high command reported fresh Greek pressure in Albania from troops withdrawn from other borders, and some foreign observers took this to mean that the Greeks feel their country is safe for the present from German attack by way of Bulgaria or Yugoslavia.

Badoglio's military skill gave Mussolini his empire; Il Duce called on him to deliver the victory over Haile Selassie's ragged legions, and Badoglio delivered swiftly, where old Marshal de Bono might have failed.

That triumph in 1936 revenged for Badoglio the Italian humiliation of 1896, at Aduwa, which he had witnessed as a second lieutenant of artillery.

Then and then only Badoglio, showered with honors, became a member of the Fascist party.

He had been King Vittorio Emanuel's chief of staff when Mussolini's Blackshirts marched on Rome, and it is reported, had told the King he could smash them with a single regiment if the King desired.

The King, instead, asked Mussolini to form a government and Badoglio went along. Il Duce sent the soldier to Brazil as ambbassador, but called him back less than two years later to become, again, the chief of staff.

Cavallero, during these days, was working up to undersecretary of war and as such, beginning in 1925, he did extensive army reorganization work.

Earlier, in the World War, he showed his skill by pulling the Italians up after the disaster at Caporetto, helping reorganize the defenses on the Piave and, as chief of operations, directing the campaign to the final Italian victory over the Austrians.

Three years ago he was commander of the Italian forces in East Africa, but he has not been on active duty lately.

Belgrade Speculates On Upheaval in Italy

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 6.—It is believed by diplomatic quarters here that the resignation of Marshal Pietro Badoglio might have serious internal repercussions in Italy. It is pointed out the general not only had a good military reputation throughout the country, but a large personal following, particularly in the regions around Turin.

There is much speculation here about possible cabinet changes of an important nature, and one diplomat today said he had received reports that the ousting of the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, is imminent.

This is a sensational rumor and so far without confirmation. But since the same source had previously reported the possibility of a major general staff shake-up, it is worth noting. He ascribed the Badoglio shift and the possibility of Ciano's dismissal to an effort by Premier Mussolini to fix the blame for the present defeat on others.

Greeks Enter Porto Edda in Triumph

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

GREEKS SAID TO HOLD TWO BASES—Reports from Yugoslavia said Greek troops had occupied Argirocastro (3). Earlier, Greek sources, claiming the capture of Porto Edda (4), said last Italian troops had been dislodged from mountain positions in the Pogradetz area (1) and the Greek advance was continuing in the direction of Elbasani and Tirana. Gains were claimed west of Premet (2), where Greeks said their troops threatened to cut off lines of retreating Italians. Black area is approximate zone through which Greeks claim advances. GREEK, from Page 1.

on the road from what was Porto Edda. The conclusion drawn from this is that the Italians have lost all will to fight, and take the defeatist attitude that if Greece wins in any engagement it is all the same by them.

In the Argirocastro area the battle is likewise reported in the Greek's favor. Here the Italians, determined to beat their enemy out of another first-class prize, have set fire to the town itself and are fleeing in the direction of Tepeleni and Klissoura.

The Greeks, it is reported tonight, may walk into Argirocastro whenever they please. In this area, generally, the Italians are said to have suffered heavily in casualties while the Greek losses were described by the official spokesman as "unimportant."

Further to the northeast in the Ostravitza Mountains the Greeks succeeded in capturing peak after peak until now they may be said to be masters of the whole range, the military significance of which is enormous.

In the regions north and northwest of Pogradetz the Greeks are reported to be continuing a steady advance, bayoneting the enemy out of all his positions. A report from the Times of London correspondent with the Greek troops in this area, describes how in recent days an entire Italian company was wiped out by comparatively few Greeks, and the taking of 2,000 Italian prisoners.

Here and there, he reports, there was terrible fighting—perhaps the fastest in the war so far—but that always Italian resistance was crushed. The enemy here apparently knows that he is making a last desperate stand before the Greek occupation of the whole of southern Albania becomes complete.

In many cases the Italian troops delegated to resist the Greek onslaught have fled so precipitately that they have left even while their food was cooking. The Greeks are eating the Italian grub and are "taking arms alive," which means capturing Italian firearms of all sorts already loaded and turning them on the fleeing foe.

Greek artillery and aviation were active during the day shelling and bombing retreating Italian columns and blowing up their lines of flight.

British air activity has also been large. It is officially announced by R. A. F. headquarters in Greece that on Wednesday a squadron of R. A. F. fighters encountered enemy fighters of the KR42 and G50 types over southwestern Albania, with the result that eight of the enemy were brought down and definitely destroyed, while seven more were severely damaged. Some other enemy planes were also damaged during the engagement, while all British pilots returned safely.

Italians Admit Heavy Reverses

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 6.—The Greeks have uncovered their Yugoslav and Bulgarian frontiers in order to throw their last ounce of weight into the attack along the Albanian coast, it was indicated in today's Italian war bulletin. Tremendous pressure is admitted, but no geographical details are given except that the communique for the first time says that the fighting is in Albania.

There is much speculation about the Greek moves and the Italians' purpose in announcing it. Some think it means that the Turks have told the Greeks not to worry about their other frontiers for they will jump in and help them when attack comes from Bulgaria or Yugoslavia. Those who hold this theory believe that Russia may have reassured the Turks.

If there were any Italians who doubted that the fighting was no longer on Greek soil, today's communique will not appeal to them.

"In Albania," it reads, "the enemy, employing forces drawn from other frontiers, continued its pressure, particularly on our left wing. Our troops counterattacked. In the fighting, soldiers of the Arezzo and Venezia divisions were beyond praise."

It is to be noted that only the left wing which is before Pogradetz is mentioned.

Rumania Decrees Death for Mutiny

Bulgaria Closes Frontier to Stop Repatriations

By Frank E. Stevens
United Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Dec. 6.—The government of Premier Antonescu, determined to "protect our frontiers and State unity" and crush any uprisings, today issued a decree providing the death penalty for military rebellion in the Rumanian armed forces.

During the recent Iron Guard "blood purge," disorders occurred among Rumanian army units, according to unconfirmed Budapest reports, and Rumanian officers and soldiers fled across the frontier into Hungary to escape Iron Guard rioting and mutiny.

The new decree was published in the Official Gazette shortly after reporters reached Bucharest that Bulgarian authorities had closed the new Bulgarian-Rumanian frontier at Dobrudja to any further repatriations of Bulgarians from Rumanian-held Northern Dobrudja.

Relations Remain Tense

Rumania's relations with Bulgaria on the south and Hungary to the west remained in a delicate state.

A Rumanian commission was expected in Bucharest to report on the situation along the Dobrudjan frontier. Closing of the frontier, it was estimated, left 8,000 Bulgarians in Northern Dobrudja. Rumanian authorities said that under the Cralova agreement, which ceded Southern Dobrudja to Bulgaria, these repatriations should be accepted by Bulgaria.

The Rumanian radio denied Hungarian charges that Hungarians in Rumania were being terrorized. It was asserted that, to the contrary, the Hungarian army on the night of September 13 killed 165 Rumanians, including women and children.

Premier Signs Decree

The Bucharest radio said that on September 9, the Hungarians killed 66 Rumanians and that on September 23 another 11 persons, including a priest and school teachers, were slain. Five other Rumanians were alleged to have been killed by the Hungarians on September 7.

The decree providing the death penalty as well as life sentences at hard labor for military rebellion, was signed by Premier Antonescu and Minister of Justice Mihail Antonescu, reflecting the government's determination to maintain order and peace in the army and among armed civilians.

The mention of "armed civilians" apparently referred to the Iron Guard and its extremist elements.

Instigators to Die

The decree said instigators of revolt as well as actual rebels would be punished by death because the punishment hitherto provided was "too lenient for the times through which we are passing, when discipline and order in the army are so essential."

Three generals were named by the ministry of national defense to try persons accused of rebellion and the decree said that "verdicts will be pronounced within 24 hours of the opening of trials and executions will be carried out within ten hours after verdicts have been rendered."

King Michael, Premier Antonescu and officers of the Rumanian high command as well as the diplomatic representatives of Italy and Germany yesterday witnessed "an important German military demonstration outside Bucharest before the high command of the German troops in Rumania," an official announcement said.

Nazis' 'Perfect' Two Will Make It a Team

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HEAD OF GERMAN WOMEN MARRIED—The marriage of Germany's women's leader, Gertrud Sholtz-Klink, and August Heissmeyer, high leader of the SS (Elite Guard) Corps, was announced yesterday in Berlin. A unique announcement in Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter said: "We are marrying December 6, thus giving our ten children a joint home." She is 38, he is 43. She has four children and he has six by previous marriages.

Leader of All Reich Women Wed to Official of Elite Corps

Frau Scholtz-Klink, Pioneer Follower Of Hitler, New Husband Hailed 'Mama and Papa' of Exemplary Family

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 6.—Frau Gertrud Scholtz-Klink, spiritual and political leader of all German women, who holds that marriage and motherhood are "the highest achievements of a woman's life," was married today to August Heissmeyer, a leader of the SS (the black-uniformed Nazi elite corps).

A simple announcement in Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter said, "We are marrying December 6, thus giving our ten children a joint home." Four of the children are Frau Scholtz-Klink's.

[What has become of her first husband, Rudolph Klink, was not disclosed. His brother Otto, an American citizen of Buffalo, N. Y., said he had not known the couple was separated, and now did not know whether Rudolph even was alive. When he last heard, before the war, he said, Rudolph was head of the Reich insurance development.]

Frau Scholtz-Klink is 39; Heissmeyer is 43; and the combined size of their families by previous marriages was the subject of universal Nazi applause.

Nazis hailed the Reich's women's leader and the vigorous SS husband as "papa and mama" of an exemplary German family.

The bride, a short-statured blonde, smart without benefit of makeup, and an exemplar of simple dress, is one of Hitler's pioneers.

She joined the Nazi movement in 1929, long before it became fashionable, and was named women's leader in Baden, her birthplace.

On Mother's Day, 1939, she symbolically presented "our children to the Fuehrer," and in the same address summed up her credo as:

"We bring the fruits of our motherhood to the Fuehrer and say to him: 'It is the best we have, therefore it belongs to you.'"

Heissmeyer, youngest of 12 children, was born at Gellersen and served in the army in the World War, in which he was wounded. He entered aviation near the end of that conflict, later he studied law, worked as a miner, and became politically active in 1925.

He became associated with the Nazi movement in 1930, and has held various positions.

At present he is principal of the Naumburg Military Academy, where one of his new wife's sons was a student, and is Reichs inspector of all military academies, which are closely coordinated with the German army.

Since 1933, the year of the Nazi rise to power, he has been a Reichstag member.

Vichy Denies Nazis Executed Students After Paris Riot

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Dec. 6.—In consequence of rumors that have been circulating since November 11 the government today issued a communique containing the official version of the student Armistice Day demonstrations in Paris on that date.

Following the demonstrations, it is stated, 123 persons were detained by police. Four persons were slightly injured.

Formal denial is made that any executions took place and it is stated that none of those arrested were brought into court.

With the suspended sentence pronounced upon Pierre Vienot, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs in the Blum government, by the military court at Clermont-Ferrand today, it was learned here that the war guilt trial before the supreme court at Riom may be expected to open early in January.

Vienot, charged with desertion before the same tribunal that recently tried Jean Zay, another Popular Front minister, was given eight years suspended prison sentence and 20 years loss of rights and destitution of his army rank of captain-interpreter. With Zay he was among the parliamentarians and government officials who left Bordeaux just before signature of the armistice, with the idea, it has since been charged, of setting up a government in North Africa.

Vienot's sentence is more lenient than that of deportation which the military court applied to Zay, who is still incarcerated at Clermont-Ferrand pending the possibility of other charges being brought against him at Riom or of his evidence being needed in the trial of those accused of responsibility for the French defeat.

The verdict says that Vienot was benefiting from mitigating conditions owing to his record in the World War—1914-1918—in which he was three times wounded and twice cited.

Americans Call Southampton Only Badly Hit Port

Word was received in Washington yesterday from authoritative American sources in Great Britain that the British ports have not been seriously damaged by the Luftwaffe.

Many ships were being serviced today in the Port of London, it was reported. Southampton is almost out of commission for the present but at Bristol, Avonmouth, Liverpool and Glasgow on the west coast and Newcastle on the east coast business was as usual. Avonmouth is the most important merchant port of them all.

As regards Liverpool great damage has been done by bombing to the Merseyside but the Port of Liverpool is practically untouched.

Strike Perils Cantonment On West Coast

House Group Is Named To Study Legislation On Defense Walkouts

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

As the lumber strike spread in the Pacific Northwest, a House committee yesterday took action that might pave the way for legislation to prevent interruptions in the national defense program.

The House Judiciary Committee established a subcommittee to report on laws dealing with espionage, sabotage and strikes in defense industries which were passed in the World War period and in the last few years.

The digests of this legislation are expected to be placed in the hands of the full committee soon; but Chairman Sumners said he did not expect the committee to make any final decisions at present. However, one member, describing the committee as in a "stand-by" condition, indicated that careful consideration would be given to legislation aimed against interference with the defense program.

Cantonment Work Threatened

Meanwhile, the spread of the lumber mill and logging camp strike in the Puget Sound area of Washington State yesterday threatened a delay in completion of a huge cantonment at Fort Lewis, where an influenza epidemic is raging.

Army medical officers were worried over the possible delay in finishing the 18,000-man cantonment for the Forty-first Division, as a mild form of influenza invalided 1,400 men either in canvas field hospitals or in tents.

A construction company official said that the strike might prevent the permanent quarters from being finished on the scheduled date of January 3.

Ten More Mills Shut

The closing of ten more lumber mills in the region yesterday brought the number of idle mills and camps to 35 and the number of men out of work to approximately 12,000.

Seven mills were shut down in the afternoon by traveling pickets of the Puget Sound District Council of Lumber and Sawmill Workers (A. F. of L.) in an effort to get an increase in wages of 7½ cents an hour to 70 cents, plus a week's vacation with pay.

Members of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union (A. F. of L.) not affiliated with the district council refused to go through the picket lines. A recent wage agreement had given them increases of 5 cents an hour.

"No Specific Suggestions"

At yesterday's meeting of the House Judiciary Committee, members learned that the Defense Advisory Commission had no recommendations for additional legislation to insure smooth flow of the rearmament program. Answering an inquiry of the committee, William H. McReynolds, secretary of the commission, wrote that "we have no specific suggestions" but "would appreciate an opportunity to be heard on any proposals that may be made from other sources for legislation affecting national defense activities."

Attorney General Jackson had previously replied that the Justice Department had no recommendations, while Secretary of Labor Perkins said her department wished time for further study. No replies have yet been received from War or Navy Departments.

For the Judiciary Committee study decided on yesterday, Chairman Sumners named a subcommittee including himself, Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, and Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas. Representative Gwynne (Republican), of Iowa, was delegated to look into legislation of the last war; Representative Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee, into laws passed since the Neutrality Act, and Representative Springer (Republican), of Indiana, to examine the general legal situation as related to present needs.

Area Selectees At Ft. Meade Now Total 82

Four More Recruits Go as Replacements After Induction Here

Strength of the contingent from the Capital and nearby counties now in training under selective service rose to 82 yesterday as four more selectees arrived at Fort Meade (Md.) reception center after induction here.

The recruits were sworn in as replacements for men who had failed to qualify physically in earlier inductions. They are Clarence L. Money, 21, cab driver, of 621 East Capitol Street; O. R. Liptrap, of Arlington, Va.; W. D. Gandy, of Rockville, Md., and N. M. Bowen.

Arrived at Meade at 5:05 p. m., the rookies were given preliminary instructions after roll call, submitted to brief physical rechecks, and were assigned to temporary Company D.

In all, nine men went through the induction process here yesterday, but three were ordered held over pending the outcome of laboratory examinations, and two were rejected.

Of the 82 men who have now been sent to the reception center at Meade from Washington, 40 now await permanent duty assignments. The remainder have been assigned to posts with Antitank, Quartermaster Corps, Coast Artillery and Chemical Warfare detachments, respectively, at Fort Meade, Camp Holabird, Md., Fort Monroe, Va., and Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

2 Auto Plants To Make 2,400 Planes a Year

Kansas City, Omaha Factories Chosen For Bomber Orders

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Staff Writer

A plan to gear the motor car industry to mass production of bombing planes advanced a step yesterday with the approval of sites for assembly plants at Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Nebr.

Operated by aircraft companies which will use parts largely fabricated in automobile factories, the two plants together are to have capacity to turn out some 2,400 medium two-motor bombers a year.

Two plants are contemplated elsewhere west of the Mississippi to produce large four-motor bombers at the rate of 1,200 annually.

15 Months Required

Under revised plans of the War Department and Defense Commission, these will supplement the output of conventional aircraft plants which are expanding toward a scheduled production rate of 36,000 military planes of all types by early 1942.

However, probably 15 months will be required, according to official estimates, to start mass production under the scheme to employ facilities of the motor car industry.

At the same time it was reported authoritatively that an original plan submitted to automobile manufacturers to produce parts for 12,000 bombers has been scaled down because of limitations which some officials consider insurmountable at this time.

William S. Knudsen, defense commission production chief, asked automobile manufacturers at Detroit in October to consider producing parts for 12,000 Army bombers and subsequently President Roosevelt announced that Great Britain had been given permission to negotiate in this country for a like number.

Under the revised program, more than three years would be required to produce the 12,000 American bombers alone. Under Mr. Roosevelt's announced intention to share munitions output equally, Britain would receive half of the bomber output.

Other limitations of the plan to employ automobile facilities were disclosed by technical estimates that not more than 40 per cent of parts could be fabricated in motor car factories.

Tulsa Site Likely

The Kansas City assembly plant is to be operated by North American Aviation Corporation of California, and the Omaha plant by the Martin Co. of Baltimore. Construction of other details are still under negotiation. Although sites have not been finally approved for the two additional plants for large bombers, a site at Tulsa, Okla., was reported under consideration for one.

The Kansas City and Omaha plants are expected to cost from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000 each and to employ 10,000 or 12,000 persons each.

As an indication of the magnitude of the scheme, persons involved in the negotiation said the four new Western assembly plants would turn out planes costing approximately $1,000,000,000 a year at present prices, representing nearly half the value of the annual output of the entire automobile industry. The estimates were based on a cost of about $200,000 for a two-motor bomber for combat, and $400,000 for four-motor bombers. These estimates include necessary spare engines.

Army to Receive Yule Gift Of 7,000 More Horses, Mules

By the Associated Press

Come Christmas, 7,000 more horses and mules will be in the Army.

The War Department disclosed that 12,832 horses and mules have been bought for the remount service in the last five months to keep pace with the expansion of military personnel.

On the basis of purchase prices, the mules can look down their long Roman noses at the supposedly more elegant horses. The Army has paid an average of $180 for good pack mules, only $160 for riding and draft horses.

Paralleling the reception center routine established for drafted men, the horses and mules get two months of initial training and observation at receiving depots.

Present plans call for two Cavalry divisions, a National Guard Cavalry brigade, nine other regiments and various miscellaneous units with full strength of 1,929 officers and 42,744 men.

Military men say the German army used some 791,000 horses, exclusive of animals in supply columns, during the invasion of France and the low countries.

Remount service veterinarians have undertaken development of vaccines and serums which will be injected through big sharp needles to immunize the burden-bearers against such maladies as distemper and the strangles.

Defense Rush Creates Social Problems, Relief Parley Told

Influx of 12,000 Workers Into Town Of 900 Cited

"Vast social and economic problems" are developing along with our total defense program, Federal officials and Social Service executives yesterday told more than 300 delegates to the American Public Welfare Association convention at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Frank Bane, a director in the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and chairman of a panel discussion at the convention, cited the case of Charlestown, Ind., as a typical example.

"There a town of 900 persons has been expanded by an influx of 12,000 workers constructing a powder plant in the vicinity and expects eventually to house an additional 15,000 plant workmen. As a result housing, sanitary, health, welfare and educational facilities are hopelessly inadequate," he said.

Warns Workers

Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, warned the welfare workers that shifts of population such as those now taking place through enlargement of defense industries particularly affect children of the workers.

"Not economic causes, but the lack of adequate facilities for medical care, housing, education and recreation, are especially harmful."

Assistant Administrator Wayne Coy, of the Federal Security Agency, which two days ago began the job of complete coordination of national welfare agencies, emphasized that "we must not sacrifice basic social gains in efforts to further national defense."

Existing public and private welfare facilities should be utilized before creating any new social service agencies to meet problems caused by defense efforts, he added.

Dr. Thomas H. Parran, Surgeon General of the Untied States, reported that health is the first problem reached in defense "boom towns" and in new cantonments, 'where new civilians outnumber soldiesr by 50 per cent, as a rule." He called the shortage of housing 'directly related to health."

Federal payments to unemployed have been cut in half since last July, it was reported by Ewan Clague, director of the Bureau of Employment of the Social Security Board. He estimated that the increase in employment due to national defense has reached 4,000,000, and may reach 6,000,000 by spring.

Brings New Problem

This is bringing on the paradox of comparatively full employment and a shortage of labor in many fields, with a continued large number of unemployed who are not skilled in defense industries, he said.

Miss Charlotte Whitton, director of the Canadian Welfare Council, listed as Canada's first defense aims protection of social gains in the face of tremendous social changes, the stabilization of upset family life, protection from inflation and its resultant lowered standard of living, and extrapolitical economic planning.

Eric H. Biddle, executive director of the U. S. Committee for the Care of European Children, asserted that social service agencies "cannot be improvised" in times of war. He credited such agencies in England with being "responsible to a large degree" for preserving that country's democratic methods and traditions.

Robert E. Bondy, director of the District Board of Public Welfare, stressed the need for competent personnel in expanding facilities for meeting defense-born social problems.

President Roosevelt last night sent congratulations to the welfare executives at the convention dinner, which was attended by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and Labor Secretary Frances Perkins.

The convention, marking the tenth anniversary of the association, "represents the climax of a period of profound development in providing security for millions of our fellow citizens," the President's message said.

cost of supplies in the United States," he said.

The British expert said he sought in yesterday's lengthy conference to find out what specific points in the British balance sheet Secretary Morgenthau wished him to cover.

Whatever the upshot of the Treasury conferences, there were growing indications that the President in recommending all feasible aid to Britain in the next Congress would insist on Congress determining the form it should take.

Whether aid short of war is to be carried forward in the form of loans and credit, modification of Neutrality Act shipping bans, or a direct appropriation in exchange for territory in this hemisphere, it was intimated the President thinks Congress should decide.

An overwhelming majority in Congress is in favor of aid to Britain, differing only on the form it should take. Many opposed to a loan because of the World War debt record, have indicated they would prefer an outright "gift" or a trade for island possessions.

While the Administration technically could lend through Government-owned corporations, without amending the Johnson Act, apparently no such short cuts were being considered.

Britain's financial emissary, Sir Frederick, a product of the British career service, who has spent his life in the exchequer, before entering Secretary Morgenthau's office was questioned about possible loans to Britain. He said he was "not up to that stage now."

When he came out he indicated he would prepare England's "balance sheet" over the week-end for submission to Morgenthau on Monday. He suggested there were many questions yet to be discussed.

Debt Not Discussed

Sir Frederick was peppered with questions by waiting reporters.

Had he been asked to talk with any administrative or legislative leaders besides Morgenthau?

He said no suggestion had come to him that he appear at the Capitol and that it would not enter into his head to seek a conference with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

Had consideration been given to British sale of some West Indian Islands to the United States to provide cash for war purchases?

He replied: "That's outside of my scope. I deal only in financial matters."

A reporter asked if Britain's old World War debt had been referred to during the conference with Morgenthau. He said it had not.

In the past, Britain has ordered only such goods as it had cash to pay for. On many of its orders it has not yet taken delivery, but Sir Frederick informed Morgenthau Britain has credits to pay for them.

Now additional purchases are proposed here, and the United States Government wants to know what assets Britain has, what its present commitments here are, and whether it has used up its cash on existing commitments.

Before England proceeds to place orders for 12,000 more planes, needed freighters and other supplies, officials are said to feel a decision should b reached on how much of their resources the British must liquidate or whether the United States will permit them to keep remaining resources and help them with credit.

Understood to figure also is this Government's responsibility to its manufacturers who require cash for goods sold to Britain. Under present policy, the Government stands ready to take over for its own defense program any war orders unclaimed by Britain.

Meantime, the Chinese and Argentine loans, $50,000,000 each from the Export-Import Bank and $50,000,000 each from the stabilization fund to support currencies of the two countries, will be concluded next week.

While one official conceded that the Argentine loan might indirectly help Britain by facilitating movement of Argentine foodstuffs to England, it was strictly a transaction between the United States and Argentina, with no conditions as to aid to England.

Accompanying Sir Frederick to the Morgenthau conference yesterday was G. H. S. Pinsent, financial attache of the British Embassy. Undersecretary of the Treasury Bell sat with Morgenthau. Specialists from the State and Treasury Departments attended the conference.

The Gallup Poll

Four in Ten Favor Neutrality Law Change To Let U. S. Ships Carry Goods Overseas

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 6.—With Washington officials canvassing ways and means of increasing United States aid to Britain, a new survey of public opinion indicates that a substantial number of Americans—but less than a majority—would favor changing the present Neutrality Act to the extent of allowing American ships to carry goods to Europe.

Under the Neutrality Act invoked at the beginning of the war, American ships are banned from entering certain prescribed zones of war, including waters around the British Isles. Not only must the British pay cash for what they buy, they must carry it away in their own vessels.

To see how the American public stands on the general principle of relaxing this neutrality provision the American Institute of Public Opinion has asked voters in all parts of the United States:

"Should the Neutrality Law be changed so that American ships can carry war supplies to England?"

One voter in seven (14 per cent) said he was undecided on the question, but among those with definite opinions the vote was:

Yes, change act..... 40%
No, don't change act..... 60%

While the present British effort seems to be the purchase of idle American shipping, which can then operate under the British flag, watchful observers in Washington think the question of using ships flying the American flag may blow up into a first-class issue in the months ahead.

Whether the use of American ships in this fashion would require convoy by United States war vessels or not, whether such a convoy system would involve the United States in the war, and indeed whether this country could spare either the merchant ships or the convoys, are major questions which would undoubtedly affect the public's final attitude.

The current survey is significant, however, in that it reveals a growing disposition among rank-and-file Americans to consider such a move even in principle.

In a comparable survey reported shortly after the outbreak of the war in 1939, the institute found 84 per cent opposed to permitting United States ships to continue in the trade with Europe, as contrasted with 60 per cent today.

Since the earlier survey was completed of course, Americans have watched the British task increase tremendously, especially with the intensification of the Nazi submarine campaign.

The survey finds the South the only section where a majority of those with opinions favor relaxing the Neutrality Act in this way. Fifty-three per cent of the Southerners included in the survey voted "yes," as compared with 40 per cent in the East and 33 per cent in the farm-belt States of the Mississippi Valley.

Democrats in the survey were 48 per cent in favor of the action; Republicans, 33 per cent.

Special Naval School Will Graduate 360

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—About 360 midshipmen will be graduated as ensigns of the Naval Reserve at ceremonies on the Chicago campus of Northwestern University next Thursday.

They have served 30 days at sea aboard a battleship or heavy cruiser and have spent three months in the special naval school here, studying navigation, seamanship and gunnery.

It was said that 300 of the midshipmen will be assigned to the battle fleet after graduation.

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation in Washington, will deliver the principal address.

Unemployed Md. Salesman Found Dead of Gas Fumes

Ralph MacWilliams, 38, who lost his job as a salesman with an oil company Monday, was found yesterday by his mother and sister overcome by carbon monoxide gas in the garage of his home, 5315 Massachusetts Avenue, Westgate, Md. A garden hose was attached to the exhaust pipe of his car and then extended into a window of the car, police said. The man was pronounced dead by Dr. Leo Donovan of Bethesda.

The sister, Mrs. J. C. Petty, of 4801 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, called a neighbor, who backed the car into the open. District police then were called. They called Montgomery County police at Bethesda, who summoned the Bethesda Rescue Squad.

Sergt. James S. McAuliffe and Policeman R. Phillips and M. Wheeler worked over the man for a few moments until the rescue squad arrived. The firemen administered oxygen with an inhalator for more than half an hour.

The mother, Mrs. A. T. MacWilliams, who lived with her son, had been visiting the sister Mrs. Petty drove her home. The women noticed the car in the garage and looked in and saw MacWilliams seated in the car. He had been in ill health for some time, they told police.

ninth Division will be finished by January 3.

"I have just completed a careful inspection of Fort Meade," Gen. Reckord said, "and it is my opinion that the Twenty-ninth Division will not be mobilized on January 3, I don't believe Meade will be ready by that time.

Housing a Policy

"We have some severe winter weather ahead of us and I don't think the men should be inducted before their camp is ready for them. We don't want to start our training with a siege of sickness."

At present no method has been worked out for housing local guardsmen during the period of physical examination and property checking before they go into camp. The present armory, the 120-year-old National Hotel, is uninhabitable and the new armory at the end of East Capitol Street is not completed.

A delay in induction might give sufficient time to complete the new armory to the point where it could be used as temporary barracks.

To suggestions that the cantonment at Fort Meade might not be completed by the scheduled dates, officials in the office of the Quartermaster General yesterday offered positive rebuttal. Only an exceptionally untoward circumstance can delay completion, they said.

Thirty Days' Notice

"We are employing 11,000 men out there now," declared one official yesterday, "and are paying double time for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays to assure completion on schedule. Unless we encounter unexpected labor trouble or a long stretch of unusually bad weather the schedule will be carried out."

Apparently the War Department does not concur in this opinion. Tentative plans for inducting the Twenty-ninth Division between January 3 and January 19, which became more or less common knowledge without being announced, seem to have been placed in abeyance. Present policy is to give a National Guard organization at least 30 days' notice before induction, to give its members an opportunity to put their personal affairs in order, a period which already has passed so far as the January 3 date is concerned.

The Fort Meade building schedule, which the Quartermaster General's office says will be followed, contemplates completion of 987 buildings, to house 18,900 men, by January 3. Another 222 buildings, to accomodate 3,117 men, are scheduled for completion by February 10.

The program for reception of trainees from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, provided for receipt of 1,500 selectees in the reception center last Monday. This center was not completed, however, and the selected men were quartered in brick barracks vacated for the purpose by regulars of the Seventieth Tank Battalion and the Ninety-third Antitack Battalion.

The next increment, 9,805 men, was expected January 3. These included 9,117 men of the Twenty-ninth Division, 344 of the new 191st Tank Battalion and 284 of the 105th Antitank Battalion. February 10 the Twenty-ninth Division was to have been brought to war strength of 17,800 by addition of 8,703 selectees. The Tank battalion was to receive 281 selectees the same day and the antitank battalion 232 men at an unspecified date.

However, new organization tables just issued provide for a war strength of about 23,000 for a square division which would require addition of about 5,000 more selectees to the Twenty-ninth and its attached troops.

Defense Sidelights

Lodge Urges Ban on 'Slave' Labor Imports

Trade Policy Must Not Support Communism, Naziism, Senator Warns

By the Associated Press

Boston, Dec. 6.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, advocates that the United States "proclaim as a national doctrine that she will not follow a foreign trade policy which in any way supports or subsidizes naziism or communism."

LODGE

Suggesting an amendment to the wage and hour law to ban imports from countries having "sub-standard" labor conditions, he told the Canadian Club of Boston last night:

"It always seemed an economic absurdity to try to raise wages and lower hours in this country and at the same time erect no protection against the products of workers whose wages were low, whose hours were long, and who worked more like slaves than like free men.

"We now have the added factor that in the conduct of our foreign trade policy we should at least not help those who dislike us and that we should actively help our friends."

Sale of Nitrate To U. S. Reported

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—It was reported today that 200,000 tons of nitrate have been sold to the United States, to be held at the disposal of the United States Government.

About 60 per cent of the purchase price will be earmarked for exports of United States machinery, it was said.

It was understood that the financing of the deal was arranged through the Export-Import Bank of Washington.

Chlorine Fumes Halt Shipyard Work

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 6 (AP).—Rupture of a liquid chlorine pipe line at a nearby chemical plant sent fumes drifting over the Seattle-Tacoma shipbuilding yards today, halting operations half an hour and necessitating brief hospitalization of a dozen men.

The chlorine fumes made breathing difficult and caused violent coughing.

Repair Ship to Be Launched Dec. 14

Camden, N. J., Dec. 6 (AP).—The New York Shipbuilding Corporation announced today the naval repair ship Vulcan will be launched at the corporation's Camden yards December 14 with with Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, as sponsor. The Vulcan was built at a cost of $13,997,000.

Tanks to Get Coat Of Olive Drab Paint

A coating of dull, olive drab paint such as used in the last war has been ordered by the Army for old tanks, scout cars and other military vehicles.

The War Department published yesterday instructions to all field commanders stating that when refinishing is required for tactical vehicles now painted with luster enamel they are to be repainted with lustreless, synthetic olive drab enamel.

Big Navy Cost Set Billion Higher

that contracts awarded to date for ship construction total $3,800,000,000 and that a like amount will be required for armor, armament and equipment, to be contracted for as the ships near completion.

As a result of the "speed-up" program in shipbuilding, it was said, new warships are going into service at the rate of one every 12 days. Short cuts are used wherever possible.

"The 40-month building period for completing cruisers has been cut as much as one-eighth," the report said, "and submarine construction time has been cut from 30 months to 24 months. Destroyers under construction are being launched three months ahead of schedule."

Not at the Peak Yet

That navy yards are not yet at peak efficiency, however, was made evident by a statement in the annual report of Admiral Robinson, which was made public at the same time. Obsolete equipment and some plant "bottle-necks" which cannot be eliminated because of the heavy volume of work, are responsible, he said.

Army and Navy officials are of the opinion that additional expenditures above what had been anticipated will have to be asked of Congress this winter for shipbuilding and Army and Navy shore construction. The "speed-up" effort is responsible for the former, while higher labor costs have run the latter out of line.

Competition among contractors for skilled workmen is one reason given for costs exceeding estimates, while work on Saturdays and Sundays at double time has been the rule at a number of posts.

Meanwhile, Treasury plans to pay for the mounting defense costs received the approval of the Senate Finance Committee. Chairman Harrison, after a closed session of the group at which Secretary Morgenthau appeared, said that Treasury plans to issue $500,000,000 in short-term "defense notes" next week were unanimously indorsed.

Alien Holdings In U.S. Business Found Minor

Monopoly Inquiry Report Is Based On 1937 Survey

Direct foreign investments in American industry, the Monopoly Committee was informed yesterday in a report, "exerted only a minor influence on prdouction in this country."

The report, which dealt with export prices and export cartels, was prepared for the committee by Paul B. Dickens of the Commerce Department. It was based on a survey of foreign industrial holdings here during 1937.

"Cartel members, rather than the cartiel organizations themselves," Dickens wrote, "were the sources of the only part of such control that was found to exist. They did not dominate any strategic industry and did not give rise to any serious problems.

"In general, it may be said that foreign control of United States industry, which was so extensive during much of the Nineteenth Century, has by the gradual and natural process fo reparation, been effectively eliminated."

He estimated the total of foreign investments in this country at $7,398,000,000, of which $1,883,000,000 represented direct investments involving 1,172 companies and branches at the end of 1937.

Petain Regime Termed Fascist

De Gaulle Aide Asserts French Are Anti-Vichy

The mass of the French people has changed from a "pro-Vichy" to an anti-Vichy" attitude and now ardently desires a British victory, Jacques de Sieyes, representative of French Gen. Charles de Gaulle, declared yesterday.

Now only a small group of officials at the French capital are in favor of continuing the Nazi-dictated rule of "ruthless discipline," de Sieyes said at a press conference at the Mayflower Hotel.

Also present was Fred G. Hoffher, an official of "France Forever," organization working for France's liberation, of which de Sieyes is the founder.

So unpopular is Pierre Laval, pro-Fascist vice premier of the Vichy regime, that he moves about only under heavy guard, the de Gaulle spokesmen asserted.

Turning his attention to French affairs in the Western Hemisphere, de Sieyes said if the commander of the "Free Frenchmen" should gain control of Martinque he would favor establishment of a United States naval base there.

A situation similar to that in the home land exists on the island, he said, with 80 per cent of the natives in favor of de Gaulle with the official clique backing the pro-Nazi government.

Asked if de Gaulle planned an alliance with General Maxime Weygand, the stocky Frenchman asserted the former would like to arrange a union of the two armies. He indicated, however, that Weygand was interested merely in "holding the colonies."

De Gaulle has at his disposal a fleet of 20 warships and 60 converted merchant ships, Hoffher asserted.

The latter declared Franch Forever was a militant organization, "waiting for the day."

Asked how French diplomats and consular officers in this country look upon the crusade, de Sieyes remarked quickly: "We ignore them."

Economic Ties In Hemisphere Termed Vital

Berle Warns Continent May Have To 'Live Within Self'

Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle yesterday urged a strengthening of economic ties between Western Hemisphere nations with the warning:

"This continent may have to live within itself for a long time."

Berle reviewed collaboration of the American republics in guaranteeing British and French possessions in the New World, the American neutrality patrol, and other defense measures, then pointed to the future, in one of a series of lectures sponsored by the Department of Agriculture's graduate school. He spoke in the South Building's auditorium.

Declaring economic defense as vital as military protection, the State Department head urged a revised economic system to permit greatly increased inter-American trade.

"We must adapt our financial system so we can take goods to where they are needed. No country must hold a surplus" and do without trading supplies to another country in need.

This intensified foreign trading may necessitate a "revision of our classic economy," the Assistant Secretary declared.

Berle declared if lasting peace were to be achieved it would be with nations, operating as a "group, independent, sovereign, with an even greater degree of cooperation" than exists in the Western Hemisphere at present.

This, he concluded, was the dream of Bolivar, South American liberator, that now commands the loyalty of all New World countries and statesmen.

Finland Still In Danger Zone, Premier Warns

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 6 (AP).—Premier Risto Ryti in a speech marking the twenty-third anniversary of Finnish independence, told the nation today it must be ready for any eventuality.

"Finland still is in the danger zone but I'm confident we will emerge from our troubles," he said.

He saw the greatest danger to European existence when the war ends, predicting "furious outbursts against the community which made possible such suffering."

Overheard Jokes Disturb Briton And Morgenthau

A group of reporters were killing time in the anteroom to the office of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday.

They were waiting to buttonhole Sir Frederick Phillips, British undersecretary of the treasury, who was closeted with Morgenthau on the financial state of the British Empire.

The meeting was long. The reporters talked shop. Their stories grew ribald, their laughter loud.

The door opened and a stenographer poked her head out.

"Gentlemen," she said, blushing prettily, "a moment please.

"Mr. Morgenthau and Sir Frederick are hard put to concentrate on finance and still catch all you say through the door.

"Mr. Morgenthau would very much like to hear your jokes—some other time."

The pressroom agreed it was the squelch courteous.

U. S. Protests to Germany Against Arrest of Mrs. Deegan in Paris

Consequently, a vigorous protest by this Government was in order.

The German Embassy at Paris was reported by the Associated Press to have replied that the matter would be taken up with the authorities in charge of the military occupation.

Government officials here have had no word on the case since the first notice from the Paris Embassy dated December 3. On the basis of that word, the State Department yesterday issued a statement saying:

"The Department of State has received a report from the American Embassy in Paris concerning the detention by German police of Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, a clerk in the American Embassy.

"Paris is under a military government.

"On the morning of December 1, two German civilians, presumably members of the German secret police, called at the apartment of Mrs. Deegan and invited her to go to the Cherche Midi Prison to visit one or more British prisoners.

"This was the second time within a week that Mrs. Deegan had been invited by German authorities to visit acquaintances at the Cherche Midi Prison.

"On December 1, she accompanied the officers. Later in the day, she returned under escort to her apartment to obtain warm clothing.

"In the evening a friend of hers received a message from an unspecified source that she was comfortably lodged and that while it would be impossible for her to be at the embassy for work on December 2, she would doubtless report for duty on December 3.

"Mrs. Deegan did not report for work on the morning of December 3.

"Appropriate action is being taken by the American Embassy in Paris."

Secretary of State Hull, at his press conference yesterday said this Government was watching the matter closely and expressed the view it would be handled very expeditiously by the diplomatic representatives at Paris with any suggestions the State Department may be able to make.

In some diplomatic circles the opinion was held that Mrs. Deegan is in no real danger but that, because she had been in contact with so many British refugees in her Embassy work, the German authorities were eager to "pump" from her information she might have.

Mrs. Deegan was born in Biltmore, N. C., and educated at St. Genevieve's School in Asheville.

She has been employed by the Paris embassy since 1936. Previously she had been in the employ of Thomas Cook & Son and then the Paramount Film Co. in Paris.

Two first cousins of Mrs. Deegan, the Misses Helen and Louise Pritchard, live in Washington at 1712 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. They are daughters of Mrs. Deegan's uncle, former Representative George Moore Pritchard, of Asheville, who served in Congress in 1929-1931.

They said last night they had no direct communication with their cousin while she was in Paris, all news of her coming through a relative.

Entente With Dies Denied by Jackson

Report Attributed to Texan 'Premature,' Says Attorney General

Attorney General Jackson said last night that the Justice Department had not arrived at any formula for cooperation with the Dies Committee, and said that statements of Chairman Dies to this effect were "premature."

Dies earlier yesterday was quoted in Nashville, Tenn., as saying that his committee had reached "complete agreement" with the department and had "worked out a formula to avoid possible friction and disagreement." He said the agreement "means we will get cooperation from the Federal Bureau of Investigation which I have been seeking for three years."

That statement, Jackson declared last night, "is illustrative of the difficulties which he (Dies) injects into our efforts to cooperate with his committee."

[Dies, at Chattanooga last night for a speech, told his secretary here by telephone that he made no such remarks as Jackson described, the Associated Press said. Robert Stripling, committee clerk, conferred with Dies by telephone in regard to Jackson's latest statement and said that Dies intended to issue no reply. Stripling said both he and Dies knew of no such "announcement" by the chairman.—Editor's note.]

Harsh Words Exchanged

Jackson and Dies engaged in a verbal duel recently when the latter charged the Justice Department with inefficiency and laxity in administering the law. Jackson replied with an attack on Dies and the committee.

President Roosevelt then intervened by warning Dies in an open telegram that ill-advised or hasty disclosures by the committee might defeat the ends of justice and hamper the Government's anti-Fifth Column efforts. At Mr. Roosevelt's invitation, Dies visited the White House to discuss methods of combating espionage and sabotage.

Dies then said he would arrange an appointment with Jackson to discuss respective spheres of the Justice Department and his committee and to work out means of cooperation. No such appointment was made, however, and on Thursday Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, a member of the committee, met with Jackson to discuss the matter.

Jackson Statement

Jackson said in his statement last night:

"Congressman Dies' announcement from Nashville, Tenn., purporting to relate the result of a conference between Congressman Voorhis and me at which Mr. Dies was not present is entirely premature.

"Congressman Voorhis and I discussed the separation between the respective functions, methods and purposes of his committee and of this department. No such formula as Congressman Dies describes has been agreed upon. No agreement has been made that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Naval or Military Intelligence Services would be placed at the disposal of Congressman Dies.

"We find little difficulty in agreeing upon general principles with Congressman Voorhis with whom, as with most of the other members of the committee, this department has never had any misunderstanding.

Sample of Difficulties

"The general principles have not been translated into any formula. Congressman Dies' erroneous description of a conference which he has left to others and concerning negotiations which are not completed is illustrative of the difficulties which he injects into our efforts to cooperate with his committee.

"When and if this department makes any commitment it will be in writing and its terms will be announced, and until then this department cannot allow itself to be committed by Congressman Dies' inaccurate statements."

Police Assailed for Using Dictograph

Thompson but also the attorney involved, Eklund's mother and the police officer who allegedly set up the dictograph under orders of the inspector.

Besides attacking the use of the dictograph, Maloney also described as "Hitlerism" what he said was the "practice of police holding suspects three or four days incommunicado." He said this was done in the Eklund case.

Inspector Thompson's statement in full is as follows:

"I just want to get the record straight. I do admit that a dictograph was used; I won't deny that, but the dictograph was not used for the purpose of listening to the defendant's conversation with his attorney.

Tip From Informer

"The sequence of events was this: "The first tip was obtained from an informer; to substantiate the informer's story, a dictograph was installed for the purpose of listening to the conversation between the informer and Eklund. Later, the lawyer (not Kirkland) arrived while Eklund was being questioned by police and demanded to see his client. The police had to grant that permission and the attorney talked with Eklund while the dictograph was still hooked up.

"However, nothing of importance to the investigation was obtained during this latter conversation. The vital information had already been substantiated before the lawyer arrived and the dictograph was not hooked up for the purpose of listening to Eklund's conversation with his attorney."

The inspector added that use of a dictograph is "not illegal."

High School Debaters at G. W. U.

Dr. Tillema Would Extend U. S. Powers

Extension of Federal power over industries vital to national defense and the curtailment of labor's right to strike during a national emergency were advocated yesterday by Dr. John A. Tillema, associate professor of political science at George Washington University, at the opening session of the eighth annual conference for senior high school students.

Prof. Tillema, participating in a model debate with Prof. Charles S. Collier, of the university Law School, held the affirmative side on the question of whether the power of the Federal Government should be increased. Prof. Collier, who based his defense on the assertion that any increase in the power of the Government would come at the expense of the people's constitutional powers, contended there already was sufficient central control.

Approximately 225 delegates attending the conference, which represents 25 high schools in Richmond, Baltimore, nearby Maryland and Virginia and the District, elected a chairman and secretary for the conference, which closes today with a luncheon in the Hall of Government at 12:15 p. m.

John Harrison, 3156 Nineteenth Street, North Arlington, Va., was named chairman and Mary Webster, 4928 Third Street Northwest, was elected secretary. She is a student at Roosevelt High School.

Harrison is a senior at Western High School and is president of Phi Beta Rho, school honor society; a member of the debating club, and captain in Company H of the Cadet Corps.

The students were greeted by Dr. Cloyd Heck Harvin, president of the university.

McLean Held Sane When He Incurred $30,000 in Debts

Four creditors of E. B. McLean, former Washington publisher and sportsman, won a finding of a District Court jury yesterday that McLean was sane when he incurred alleged obligations totaling more than $30,000.

Adjudged of unsound mind in Baltimore in 1933, McLean has been in an institution since then. The lawsuits are being defended by Attorney John J. Wilson, who is in charge of the $7,000,000 McLean estate.

Claimants were:

Attorney William H. Wadhams, Paris, $15,000 for aiding McLean's efforts to obtain a Riga, Latvia, divorce; the Hotel George V, Paris, $7,660 for a suite for six months in 1932; Martin Finn, $5,100 salary, and Jack Finn, his brother, $5,900 for salary.

Takoma Group Adopts 7-Point Health Program

A seven-point health program for Takoma Park, Md., has been adopted by the Health and Welfare Center of that town, Mrs. Walter P. Harman, president, announced yesterday.

Organizations in the town will be asked to support the program which asks for the tightening of sanitary conditions and more adequate health facilities.

The program asks regulations for keeping pigs, cows, horses and chickens a certain distance from dwellings in congested areas, cooperation with county-wide efforts to improve sanitary inspection and the appointment of a sanitary inspector for Takoma Park; cooperation with other groups in a county-wide revision of laws relating to septic tanks and sewer connections; cooperation with the Montgomery County Public Lay Health Council's campaign for an enlarged health program.

The committee making the recommendations consists of Mrs. George E. Robertson, chairman; Mrs. Harman and Herman C. Heffner.

Nazi Woman Gives Rolls To French, Is Jailed

Kaiserslautern, Germany, Dec. 6. Because she gave two French prisoners of war employed in the farm where she was working some rolls to eat, 30-year-old Johanna Hilder was sentenced to one month's imprisonment by the local court, it was reported today.

She defended herself by saying that she thought the edict prohibiting all dealings with prisoners applied only to bread.

FCC Grants Permits To 7 FM Stations

Call Letters Devised So Broadcast Origin Can Be Figured Out

A distinctive scheme of assigning call letters to the new frequency modulation broadcasting stations was announced yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission coincidently with the granting of permits for the construction of seven FM stations.

At the same time, the FCC released a preliminary report on its investigation of radio stations broadcasting foreign language programs. This showed 199 domestic stations now schedule broadcasts in one or more foreign languages.

Thirty-one foreign languages are represented in 1,721 current weekly radio programs, the FCC stated, and consume 1,330 hours of broadcasting. Approximately three-fourths of this broadcast is in Italian, Polish, Spanish, Jewish and German, the proportion decreasing in the order listed.

Most of the stations are of low-power and aim to serve only local foreign language communities.

The seven applicants who were granted FM construction permits are: WDRC, Inc., Hartford, Conn.; Metropolitan Television, Inc., New York City; Bamberger Broadcasting Service, New York; WGN, Inc., Chicago; National Broadcasting Co., Chicago; Walker-Downing Radio Corporation, Pittsburgh, and National Life & Accident Insurance Co., Nashville, Tenn.

The FCC estimated that the new "staticless" stations will serve an area of 50,000 square miles, embracing more than 20,500,000 potential listeners.

FM station call letters, the commission explained, will be designed to enable a listener to figure out the frequency assignment and the city in which the station is located.

As in present standard stations the first letter will be W if the station is east of the Mississippi River, and K if the station is west of the Mississippi.

Thus, the FCC explained, the call letters W41DC would indicate that the FM station is operating on 44,100 kilocycles from the District of Columbia.

The letter E inserted in the call letters will indicate that the station is educational or noncommercial.

Schools Must Teach Religion, Vichy Decrees

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Vichy, Dec. 6.—Drastically reversing the educational policy of the Third Republic, the Petain government promulgated today the return of the idea of God to the French public school system.

Theoretically the notion of a Supreme Deity was officially recognized by the charter of the French educational system as laid down by Jules Ferry, founder of the modern French public school system, but in practice it had been ignored by the great majority of French school teachers for years.

But now, by a law just promulgated, Georges Ripert, minister of education, has decreed that in the elementary schools, one hour per week must be devoted to the following subject—"the principal duties of the pupils toward their neighbors (family and country) and toward God."

Franco Forms 'Work Militia' Of Producers

By the Associated Press

Madrid, Dec. 6.—A new system of political discipline for the Spanish people was inaugurated by Generalissimo Franco today with a national syndical law decreed to organize the country's productive life.

Franco likewise set into motion the National Youth Front, which will train the Nation's youth from childhood. The feminine section will take charge of girls from their seventh through their seventeenth years; boys will enter at the age of 7 and remain until called for military service at 21.

Franco asserted that henceforth the Spanish people would be organized into a "work militia" and that after the syndical system reached top efficiency, all Spain would be a "gigantic syndicate of producers."

help that made this victory possible.

Four motherless children and no job—that was Mr. K.'s problem last year. The children's mother had been killed in an automobile accident, adding grief and more difficulties to an already heavy burden. The children's grandmother left her home and came to Washington to care for the motherless household.

Then a gift of $90 from The Post fund provided for the minimum needs for the family for two months and gave the Mr. K. time to search for work. Finally, with the aid of a family agency, he found a steady job as a janitor at $90 a month.

Meanwhile, the oldest boy, in his teens, was becoming a problem—he wasn't keeping up in his school work and had been drifting into bad company. A vocational test at the D. C. Employment Center was followed by training in shoemaking. He became skillful at the trade and has now been placed in a job.

With two members of the family working, and with the grandmother to take care of the home, the family now looks forward to a secure future.

Today, the eleventh and twelfth families among the 50 neediest this year are described—with a reminder that immediate help is required to solve their problems.

Family No. 11

Mrs. G., a widow with the sole responsibility of supporting three sons of school age, has kept working long after she felt too tired and ill to go on. Her small wages at a laundry have been all that she has had.

When she finally had to give up recently, she weighed only 95 pounds. She is in need of medical attention immediately. Her employer has told her that her job will be held for her. Her main concern is worry over how her boys will be taken care of during her illness.

It has been arranged that the landlady will watch over them, if Mrs. G. can pay for their food and keep up the rent on their small furnished rooms. Mrs. G. can apply for unemployment compensation, but there is a waiting period. In the meantime, her hope for a solution to her problems lies in help from The Post's fund. Ninety dollars is needed to help the family for the next two months.

Case certified and help administered by Catholic Charities. Amount needed: $30.

Family No. 12

Mr. and Mrs. R. and their two children have been living in one crowded room, since he became ill and had to give up his work as a skilled laborer four months ago. He has been following carefully the clinic's advice about his health, and feels that he will soon be able to look for a job.

But he is so worried about the living conditions in which his family has been placed that he is hampered in his own recovery and in his fight to regain independence. If the family could move to a roomier place, and could be assisted with a little furniture and other necessary expenses, they would be lifted from the list of neediest families and set on the way to independence. The family should be assisted for two months. It will cost $110.

Case certified and help administered by Salvation Army. Amount needed: $110.

These needy families are not eligible for public relief, and the funds of the various social agencies are severely limited, insufficient to meet all the demands made upon them.

Each one of the 50 neediest families was selected by one of the five following agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion welfare department, Salvation Army and Bureau of Rehabilitation. These agencies, which are members of the Community Chest and are supported by Chest funds, carry all costs of administering The Post's fund for the neediest families.

1889 Inaugural Fund to Aid 514 Families

Committee Decides To Use $3,000 Of $6,800 Interest

Five hundred and fourteen needy families will be clothed and provided fuel this winter because the Centennial Inauguration of 1889 was a financial success.

A fund of $26,000—which has now grown to $42,750, due to interest—was left the District by the Centennial Inauguration Relief Committee. The interest on the original fund was to be used to purchase fuel and clothing for the District's poor. In checking the papers left by the late District Audior Daniel J. Donovan, the Acting Auditor, A. R. Pilkerton, came across this legacy as well as seven others.

It developed that prior to 1936 a part of the interest had been expended but since that time the funds had been left intact.

Yesterday a committee of citizens met with the Commissioners and decided to use $3,000 in the immediate future for the District's needy. Conrad Van Hyning, assistant welfare director, present at the meeting, recommended the money be used to provide clothing and fuel for 514 families who receive monthly relief checks which only cover food and rent. He was instructed by the Commissioners to make a detailed account on how the $3,000 is to be spent. Van Hyning said it would require about $1,767 a month to take care of this group.

Since 1936 the fund has accrued $6,800 in interest and it is this amount the Commissioners intend to spend. Only $3,000 will be spent within the next few months, however, the Commissioners said.

Besides the Commissioners and the welfare official, the following were present: Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Association; C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the Board of Education; James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade; Thomas Egan, of the Rotary Club; Richard Tennyson, of the Recreation Department and Prof. Charles Thomas, of the Federation of Civic Associations.

14,000 Inaugural Seat Tickets Will Go on Sale Here Tuesday

Tickets for inaugural seats along Pennsylvania Avenue will be placed on sale Tuesday at 723 Fifteenth Street Northwest, an office used by the local Willkie campaigners, it was announced yesterday.

Alfons Landa, assistant chairman of the inauguration committee, in making the announcement, said the committee had not decided on the price of seats. However, there will be fewer seats erected for the inaugural proceedings along Pennsylvania Avenue than four years ago. It is expected only 14,000 seats will be erected, all covered in case of rain. Last inauguration, 37,000 seats lined Pennsylvania Avenue.

Col. David McCoach, jr., chairman of the committee in charge of the stands, said if more seats are needed, depending on the sale of tickets, stands from the World's Fair or from the Ringling Brothers Circus will be brought to the Capital and erected.

The stands will be erected on Pennsylvania Avenue, between Fifteenth Street and West Executive Avenue, and at the south corner of the United States Treasury. If more are needed they will be placed on the square in front of the Commerce Building.

The first application to lead the inaugural parade was handed the committee yesterday by the White House. It was from Robert Maxwell, R. F. D. 2, Wesson, Miss. Maxwell wrote the President:

"Just a few lines to let you know just how glad I was for you to get reelected back to President. Of course, I suppose I am the first Negro in history to ask for you to let me lead the Democratic donkey in the inaugural parade."

Joseph Davies, former Belgian Ambassador, who is chairman of the general committee, took the matter under advisement.

Radio Is Silent On Ship Carrying Roosevelt Party

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt cruised somewhere in the Caribbean tonight, the three ships in his party maintaining radio silence.

Communication apparently was terminated last night shortly after the President departed from Kingston, Jamaica, where he inspected sites for United States naval bases in that British island.

The Navy Department in Washington said the silence probably was ordered to avoid revealing the position of the cruiser Tuscaloosa, on which the President is journeying, and the accompanying destroyers Mayrant and Trippe, although they are in the area covered by the United States neutrality patrol.

At the Naval Communications Office here, it was said the silence would continue for an indefinite period.

Joseph C. Beal, former Washington newspaperman and now national educational director of the Boy Rangers, will be guest of honor Staurday of the organization's Washington Lodge No. 1029 at a meeting at 11 a. m. today in the Ranger Lodge Hall, Foxhall and Reservoir Roads Northwest.

New Concerto Rolls Audience In Aisles—Leaving

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Philadelphia Orchestra played Arnold Schoenberg's new violin concerto today—its world premiere performance—and a score of the audience left the Academy of Music until Leopold Stokowski had put down his baton.

One of several women who flounced out described the new work—which uses an "atonal" system that the Austrian modernist invented—as containing noises like those of "Market Street (the principal thoroughfare) on New Year's Eve."

"The result," said Edwin H. Schloss, Record critic, "is an entirely new musical syntax, and the effect is that of a lecture on the fourth dimension delivered in Chinese at a reading from Gertrude Stein with sound effects."

Traffic Setup Called 'Good' By 'Professor'

Inspector Miller Wins Praise on His Investigation Unit

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, District traffic expert, underwent a "checkup" by a training official of Northwestern University Traffic Institute yesterday and was pronounced "doing nicely."

A. R. Forster, director of training at Northwestern and representing the Kemper Foundation for Traffic Police Training, conferred with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, and Inspector Miller regarding Washington's program to reduce traffic deaths and injuries.

Forster's visit was described as a "follow-up" service of the foundation to alumni of the Traffic School. Inspector Miller attended the university for nine months before organizing the 32-man accident investigation unit here.

The traffic experts reviewed the setup of the Traffic Squad and discussed plans for further traffic control and accident-prevention activities in the future.

Forster explained that the District's present accident investigation work is a "fundamental step in a long-range traffic safety program."

"Police can begin a traffic safety program with a 'crack-down' period," Forster declared, "but after a few months enthusiasm dies down and results are negligible.

"With the long-range 'accident investigation' program law enforcement agencies are able to determine the principle causes of accidents and are able to effect a cure."

Forster said the local police are making "very good progress" in their present safety program.

Holmes Describes Isles of Greece In Happier Day

Scenes little affected by world affairs a year ago, but where now naval vessels patrol and bombing planes fly were shown in pictures to members of the National Geographic Society last evening at Constitution Hall by Burton Holmes, who toured the mainland and islands of Greece just before war broke out in Europe.

Among the spots shown by Holmes which have suffered from bombs in recent weeks were Corfu, lovely island near the entrance to the Adriatic Sea, Athens and Crete, and Rhodes and Kos, isles of the Dodecanese group where Italy maintains bases.

The lecturer also visited Delphi, home of the famous oracle, Olympia, where the Olympic Games were held, and the Aegean isles of Samothrace, Delos and Thera.

Dunn Loring Boy Faces Death Thrice and Wins

Over at Georgetown University Hospital they're talking about that plucky little fellow on the second floor—the one who had three operations in two weeks, stood at death's door and never so much as whimpered.

November 13, Bobby Miller, son of Joseph Miller, of Dunn Loring, Va., was rushed to the hospital with a rupture.

Following an emergency operation peritonitis set in, and on November 23 they wheeled the youngster to the operating room again. But four days later Bobby was wavering on the brink again. Again he was operated on.

The nurses and doctors talk especially about the big smile Bobby wore all the time. And they remark, happily, he's getting well now.

Wheat Lifts Courthouse Picture Ban

A long standing ban against photography anywhere in the District Courthouse was revoked yesterday following seizure, and return, of a film holder belonging to a press cameraman.

Waiting to testify before a grand jury, Alfred M. Lilienthal, chairman of the First Voters League, and John Burke, president of the New York chapter of the National Republican Builders, agreed to pose for Robert Clover, Associated Press photographer, of 3150 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

District Attorney Edward M. Curran gave permission for the picture to be taken in his office. A few minutes later, Michael Kearney, chief deputy United States marshal, required Clover to surrender the holder containing the film he had just exposed.

Kearney said he was obeying the orders of Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court, who has banned photographers for years, having deputy marshals forbid them to bring their instruments inside the building.

Photo Editor W. R. Walton, of the Associated Press, promptly protested to the Department of Justice that the power of the court did not extend to executive officers and that in any event seizure of the photographer's property was unconstitutional. Department officials conferred with Kearney, who then went before Chief Justice Wheat with Clover. After the chief justice heard the situation Clover's film holder was restored.

Kearney later announced that no photography would be permitted in courtrooms or in the corridors but that cameramen might enter the building with their gear with impunity. Hereafter, said Kearney no objection will be voiced against pictures being made in the offices of any official who permits it.

Lend China 5% of Supernavy's Cost And She'll Whip Japan, Says Lin-Yutang

San Francisco, Dec. 6 (AP).—Dr. Lin Yutang, Chinese author, philosopher and educator said today the United States "instead of spending $5,000,000,000,000 for the construction of a super navy, can give us just 5 per cent of that amount and we'll finish Japan off.

"It's becoming steadily more apparent that aid to China is the cheapest way of defense in the Pacific for the United States—just as aid to Britain is your foremost defense in the Atlantic," he told interviewers.

"Japan joined the Rome-Berlan axis, of course, with the idea of scaring the United States into a 'hands off' policy—only to learn that your country doesn't scare easily. Just give us airplanes and other war materials and China will be more than able to settle this Japanese threat, once and for all."

Dr. Lin said China was winning the war in the Orient.

"Japan simply cannot afford the manpower to push through a successful, decisive campaign against us. That kind of campaign would take 250,000 fresh soldiers. Japan hasn't got them.

"The Japanese soldiers are becoming very demoralized, wondering why they are fighting.

"Japanese officers like the war, however. They are all getting rich on the graft and 'squeeze' ni occupied territory.

"A lot is said and written about the Burma road. Well, we're not dependent on that road.

"There are hundreds of little Burma roads, each one representing a Japanese officer who is anxious to be bribed. We can smuggle anything into China—actually anything, and any place."

Doctor Lin said he talked privately with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in Chungking recently and found China's leader "happy with a kind of happiness that shines from the inside, prefectly at east and acting as though he has won the war already".

2 Police Veterans To Retire Dec. 31 Under New Rule

Two veteran Ninth Precinct policemen—Vernon Eskridge, 58, and William F. (Dusty) Miller, 55, will retire December 31, first patrolmen to take advantage of a new police retirement law made effective in October.

Eskridge, who lives at 610 Fourth Street Northeast, has been station clerk at the Ninth Precinct for several years. Miller, who lives at Seat Pleasant, Md., has been a patrolman.

Both men have had more than 25 years' service and are 55 or over, the two requirements necessary under the new statute. Formerly a policeman could retire only because of physical disability or after his sixtieth birthday.

Eskridge was appointed to the force in 1907 and Miller was appointed five years later. The former said last night he expects "just to take things easy," while Miller will occupy his time in the operation of a grocery store in Seat Pleasant.

President Indorses Bible Sunday Theme

Special Broadcasts And Services to Mark Day Throughout U.S.

President Roosevelt has indorsed the observance of Universal Bible Sunday throughout the land tomorrow, when special sermons, radio broadcasts and other programs will be heard.

"I can think of no more fitting way in which to celebrate Universal Bible Sunday," said the Chief Executive, "than through exposition from the greatest number of pulpits of the theme, 'For the Healing of the Nations.'

"The tragic events being enacted over wide areas of the earth, with their attendant suffering, anguish and horor, but confirm our conviction that acceptance of the plain teachings of the Bible would restore peace and happiness in a war-torn world. Despite all that we see today of the tragedy which man's selfishness has wrought in the world, we know that the ancient truths of the Bible will prevail over all error because they constitute the teachings of God.

"Righteousness alone exalteth a nation, and the great truths of the Sermon on the Mount are as potent a guide today as when they were first uttered 19 centuries ago."

Since the Bible is the one international book, having been translated in its entirety into 183 different languages, and some part of it into a total of over 1,000 tongues, the reason for the choice by the American Bible Society of Sunday's theme for Sunday this year is readily apparent.

In addition to the celebration in the churches, there will be hundreds of broadcasts throughout the Nation. The Columbia Broadcasting Co.'s popular Sunday morning program, "Wings Over Jordan," will present Dr. V. C. Hodges, secretary of the Cleveland division of the American Bible Society's colored agency, At 9:15 a. m., E. S. T., the Columbia network also will carry an address by Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania.

The American Bible Society, which this coming year will celebrate its 125th anniversary, has sponsored Universal Bible Sunday for many years.

Meanwhile, announcement was made yesterday that Dr. W. L. Darby, former executive secretary of the Federation of Churches here, has been elected president of the Washington City Bible Society.

Also named were George B. Fraser, president of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, vice president; Page McK. Etchison, religious work director of the Y. M. C. A. and president of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, second vice president; the Rev. W. Kenneth Lyons, pastor of Mount Tabor Methodist Church, Georgetown, secretary, and A. N. Schroeder, general superintendent of the Concordia Evangelical and Reformed Sunday School, treasurer.

W. Galt Mish, official of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church; Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association, and Dr. Wilmer Souder, teacher of the Everyman's Class at National City Christian Church, were elected to the executive committee, on which the above officers also serve.

National Christian Mission Will Meet Here Bringing Record of Deeds in Other Cities

By Robert Tate Allen

(This is the first of a series of articles about the National Christian Mission. Another will appear on December 14.)

When the National Christian Mission and its leaders gather in the Nation's Capital on February 2, 1941, they will carry their challenging Christian message into every strata of human activity.

Begrimed mechanics and trim business executives, housewives and society matrons, professional women and store clerks, youth and age, high school and college students, and even convicts—all will feel the impact of the mission, whose statement of objectives declares:

"In a world at war the National Christian Mission is thrust forth with a high sense of immediacy and urgency. At its heart is the conviction that the Christian Gospel has the only adequate message for the world today. It is a united movement of Christian forces to bring the Gospel, in all its validity and vitality, to the people of the Nation for their sincere consideration and their personal acceptance.

Seminars Planned

Leaders of the mission expect to carry out those objectives through seminars, breakfast and noonday meetings, mass gatherings, youth programs and other activities during the week of the mission here. The mission opened in September in 22 major metropolitan areas.

Scenes of the seminars, where churchmen will meet to discuss religion and its relationship to mental hygiene, the home, world problems and other subjects, will be the following churches, selected because of their strategic locations:

Foundry Methodist Church, on Sixteenth Street between P and Q Streets Northwest; Chevy Chase Presbyterian, Chevy Chase Circle; Metropolitan Presbyterian, Fourth and B Streets Southeast; McKendree Methodist, Woodbridge; Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, and Emory Methodist Church.

Mass Meeting Set

Mass meetings will be held at Constitution and Continental Halls on the opening nights, and at Calvary Baptist Church and the Washington Cathedral on closing days, with Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, and Dr. Paul Scherer, Lutheran vespers hour speaker, addressing the first two meetings, and Bishop Arthur Moore, head of the Atlanta area of the Methodist Church and new chairman of the Methodist Board of Missions and Church Extension, addressing the two last-named programs. They and the other leaders also will speak before the seminars, youth meetings and other functions. The noonday meetings will be held at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest.

The committee on arrangements for the local mission is headed by Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church, and the following:

Committee Chairmen

Committee chairmen will be:

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, business and professional groups; Dr. Horace E. Cromer, of Emory Methodist Church, program; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, of First Congregational Church, places of meetings; H. L. Sweinhart, publicity; Page McK. Etchison, head of the religious work department of the "Y," seminars; the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, social workers; Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, spiritual resources; the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, of Park View Christian Church, transportation, and Miss Bess Miles, youth organizations.

Stories of the success of the mission in other cities, told by local clergymen, illustrate the spiritual grip the mission is taking upon the Nation.

One pastor tells how the participants in the mission in a Midwestern city went into the jails and discovered conditions that prompted a general vice cleanup.

Another clergyman describes how a traveling companion on a plane trip to a mission scene admitted, in a man-to-man talk, that he had been a hard-boiled professional football player who had fallen away from regular church attendance. He listened courteously to the pastor's description of the mission, and landed at a certain airport, from which the cleric flew on to his detsination.

After fulfilling his first speaking engagements, the pastor flew to the city where his companion had landed, a place where another phase of the Christian Mission was beginning. That companion—who turned out to be an airline official—had voluntarily arranged for the cleric to broadcast from the airport in behalf of the mission.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, telling of his addresses at the mission meetings in the Midwest, said he was never so convinced of the worthwhileness of the project as when he spoke before thousands of high school students.

(Next week: Some of the personalities of the mission team coming here)

"TELL ME THE OLD, OLD STORY"

ARABELLA KATHERINE HANKEY

Tell me the old, old story,
Of unseen things above,
Of Jesus and His glory,
Of Jesus and His love.
Tell me the story simply,
As to a little child,
For I am weak and weary,
And helpless and defiled.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This song is taken from a poem of the life of Christ and His love, written by Miss Hankey during a long convalescence. Another hymn favorite taken from the latter part of the same poem is "I Love to Tell the Story."

Mrs. Edward L. Weber, organist at Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, is shown at new organ, which is to be dedicated on December 15. Standing nearby is the Rev. J. Harold Mumper, pastor

By Robert Tate Allan

The congregation of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church on December 15 will climax its long-range church renovation program by dedicating the new $8,000 organ.

The Rev. J. Harold Mumper, pastor, will conduct the dedicatory rites at 11 a. m. and Mrs. Edward L. Weber, organist, will present a recital at 7:15 p. m., followed by a program of vocal and instrumental music.

Guest soloist of the occasion will be Joseph W. Sheckard, who during the past summer sang with the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company and the National Symphony Orchestra at the Water Gate, and also with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia, Pa.

Potter to Give Recital

On December 16 at 8 p. m., Louis A. Potter, well-known concert organist and director of the Washington Choral Society, will give a recital on the organ.

The new organ is the final phase of a $23,000 church renovation project which began two years ago with the repairing and repainting of the exterior of the church at Ninth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast, followed later by inside renovation and the installation and dedication of new stained glass memorial windows. They were the work of Henry Lee Willett, of Philadelphia, who designed many of the windows in the Washington Cathedral.

The Planning Committee for the entire project included John H. Rush, chairman of the church property committee; Warren R. Seltzer and Herbert F. Aldrich, the last-named church music chairman.

Directs Two Choirs

Mrs. Weber, in addition to her organ work, directs both the senior and intermediate choirs, the latter of which was formed by the Rev. Mr. Mumper when he came as pastor four years ago. Mrs. Henry F. Folmer leads the intermediate choir.

Among other organizations and their leaders at Keller Church are the Brotherhood, with T. Ralph Manning as president; the Ushers' Association, of which Allan R. Lester is chairman; the Ladies' Aid Society, headed by Mrs. Earl O. Henry; the Woman's Missionary Society, headed by Mrs. Mumper, the pastor's wife; Karolina Hedler, senior Christian Endeavor Society president, and Barbara Manning, intermediate Endeavor president. Sister Madeline L. Schaefer is parish deaconess.

Before coming to Keller Church, the Rev. Mr. Mumper served pulpits in Westville, N. J., and Lititz, Pa., meanwhile also being secretary of the Philadelphia and Harrisonburg conferences, respectively, of the Eastern Pennsylvania Synod of the Lutheran Church.

He received his Bachelor of Science degree from the Lutheran Theological Seminary there, and a degree of Master of Sacred Theology from the Philadelphia Seminary in 1931.

New Surface Cancer Remedy Reported as Great Advance

Wisconsin Researcher Combines a New Ointment, Surgery; Cures Claimed In 93% of 'Accessible' Cases

By the United Press

Madison, Wis., Dec. 6.—A promising technique of treating certain types of external cancer with an ointment combined with surgery under miscroscopic control was announced today by a 30-year-old University of Wisconsin surgery instructor and research associate.

The treatment, a chemo-surgical method of removing skin and accessible cancers, was developed by Dr. Frederic E. Mohs, member of the Wisconsin State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

Mohs described his treatment in a copyrighted interview with the Wisconsin State Journal. Later in the day he gave a detailed report in an address before the Western Surgical Association at Topeka, Kan.

Mohs' report will be published in The Archives of Surgery, an American Medical Association publication. Prof. Michael F. Guyer, chairman of the University Zoology department, with whom Mohs began his research as a sophomore, said that, in Mohs' hands, the treatment "is the greatest advancement the treatment of external cancer has had in 25 years."

Mohs said his treatment was a success in 93 per cent of 440 test cases and he believes the high percentage of success is indicative that chemosurgery, "given properly", is capable of saving the lives of "nearly all" persons suffering from accessible cancers.

He said he had treated successfully cancer of the ear, eyelid, hand, arm, chest, leg, face, mouth, lip, nose, accessory nasal sinuses, genito-urinary areas, and the head, including the saliva-producing parotid gland. He said he had not yet "definitely determined chemo-surgery's place in the treatment of cancer of the breast."

Mohs said he had experimented with at least 20 substances in search for a base for the ointment he uses, and finally had selected crushed clinkers from the university heating plant.

In recent experiments, Mohs discarded the clinkers for another substance which he did not identify.

Dr. Ryan Sees America Saving Europe's Culture

America may eventually have to become a refuge for European culture, Dr. Edwin Ryan said yesterday at the First Friday luncheon of the Washington Section, League of Laymen's Retreats.

"Western civilization seems to be on the verge of collapse," he declared at the Willard, "and its literature, architecture, physical sciences political sciences and economics must be preserved. If European culture is to survive, it must have a place of refuge."

Professor of South American Church History and secretary of the Institute of Ibero-American Studies at Catholic University, he spoke shortly after announcement was made of the selection of Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, local Retreat unit president, as a Prior of the Third Order of Saint Dominic.

Formed in the thirteenth century and oldest Catholic laymen's group in the world, the Order, a strictly spiritual organization, has about 400 local men enrolled from various parishes. The honor to Dr. Magee, making him head of the local chapter of the order, was conferred several weeks ago at the Dominican House of Studies. He succeeded William Joseph Neale.

Peixotto, Artist, Author, Dies at 71

Peixotto first came to public notice in 1893, when his paintings won honorable mention at the Chicago World's Fair.

Later, the artist was a defender of the idea of murals in public buildings erected as WPA projects and devoted much of his time to inspecting sites for possible art projects.

In the latter part of the last century, Peixotto became illustrator for several of the better known magazines.

He illustrated Theodore Roosevelt's "Life of Cromwell," Henry Cabot Lodge's "Story of the American Revolution," Clayton Hamilton's "Wanderings," and Edith Wharton's "Italian Backgrounds."

Mexico May Get U. S. Destroyers

Mexico City, Dec. 6 (AP).—An authoritative source reported today that negotiations were under way for transfer of several old type United States destroyers to Mexico in exchange for use of Mexican naval facilities and other concessions.

This source said that while conversations had been in progress for several weeks between the State Department in Washington and the foreign office here no agreement had yet been reached.

Btween 6 and 12 destroyers, similar to those which the United States dispatched to Britain in return for naval bases in British Western Hemisphere possessions, probably would be involved in the deal it was said.

Nazis Alter Raider's Disguise Twice a Day, Ex-Captive Says

By John A. Moroso 3d

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Dec. 6.—A masquerading German sea raider prowling Southern waters, laying hundreds of mines and capturing and sinking enemy merchantmen is a huge rebuilt passenger liner—so large that she has been equipped for a three-year voyage of plunder.

This was told to the Associated Press today by Capt. Cornelius Arundell, British skipper who was imprisoned on the vessel for 64 days after the raider sank his ship, the 5,207-ton Haxby, near Bermuda.

The German marauder leads a chameleon-like existence, carrying elaborate "stage props" to change her appearance from day to day. She is even equipped with a telescopic funnel further to change her superstructure.

Capt. Arundell, 49, who came here from England to command an American freighter recently purchased by Britain, was bound by admiralty secrecy not to identify the raider, her size, and other data, but he did give this picture:

"She was a decent-size man of war, much more than 10,000 tons. If you knew her name you would be surprised. Her skipper is a frigate captain (German rank equivalent to commander in the American Navy) about 42 years old.

"She carries six guns, four of them broadside, and other arms, including a huge supply of mines.

"While I was aboard she changed her disguise from a Greek ship to a Brazilian and then a Dutchman. Through special rebuilding and light steel plates she could change her entire superstructure in a short time. A telescopic funnel helped do this.

"Her superstructure was constantly being repainted—in the morning it would be white and before night it would be buff. This gives you an idea of the huge crew she carried."

(Capt. Arundell dodged questions on the exact size of the crew, but acknowledged that it comprised more than 300 men.)

"She slipped out of Hamburg April 6 while the British navy was rushing to Norway to fight the German invasion there. My ship was her first victim."

Enroute from Greenock to Corpus Christi, Tex., last April, the Haxby sighted what appeared to be a Greek ship. A moment later the vessel crossed her bows and began firing without warning.

"They killed 16 of my men, smashed the lifeboats and set the ship on fire before we abandoned her," the bronzed veteran of Scapa Flow in the last war said.

The 24 survivors among the Haxby's crew were taken aboard the raider, which then laid mines off West Africa, met the Nazi tanker Winnetou at sea for refueling and then proceeded to New Zealand, where 230 mines were dropped.

On June 18 the Britons were put aboard a captured Norwegian freighter, the Tropic Sea.

The Tropic Sea was scuttled 70 days later by her German prize crew when a British submarine accosted her off Bordeaux. The Britons were rescued by the submarine and taken to Gibraltar.

The submarine—the Truant—was unable to accommodate the 33 Norwegians and 30 Germans aboard the Tropic Sea and left them in lifeboats with orders to remain where they were until flying boats arrived.

The Germans fled and managed to reach Spain in lifeboats. The Norwegians were rescued the next day.

Back in England, Capt. Arundell was officially listed as dead and his wife had been receiving pension payments from the Government for three months, although she had refused to sign a death certificate. He returned home October 4, six months after leaving Glasgow.

His one happy experience on the raider was his June 22 birthday.

"The prison officer gave me a carton of American cigarettes, a tin of British cigarettes and apologized for not being able to give me a bottle of whisky," he said.

The raider, he said, is not the one operating off South America, explaining that "ours was much larger."

Problem Of City Growth

A major problem in city planning has been dropped into the lap of the District Zoning Commission. Appearing personally before that body, Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, recommended that the height limitation on buildings in Washington be reduced from 130 feet to 110 feet to prevent further congestion. The response of the commission to this appeal is certain to have an important bearing upon the future growth of the city.

Presumably Mr. Delano's statement is based on a study of Washington's rapid growth in recent years by Harland Bartholomew, city planning consultant. Mr. Bartholomew found an "unfortunate trend in the location of high buildings," referring particularly to the increase in large structures on Connecticut and Pennsylvania Avenues. He believes that the business district will tend to concentrate in the vicinity of Lafayette Park unless the trend is discouraged. Such a development would be undesirable, he believes, because (1) it would intensify present traffic congestion, (2) this area adjacent to the White House is cut through with many diagonal streets and is not suitable for a business district, and (3) migration of the business district west of Fifteenth Street would leave a blighted area between Ninth and Thirteenth Streets that would be costly to property owners and the community alike.

So there seems to be good logic behind Mr. Bartholomew's suggestion that building heights be more sharply restricted west of Sixteenth Street. The central business district east of that street and north of Pennsylvania Avenue is admirably located. From the viewpoint of the city as a whole, further improvement of this area seems preferable to more intensive commercial building on such arteries of traffic as Connecticut and upper Pennsylvania Avenues.

What Mr. Delano is particularly eager to avoid is further congestion of the city that would necessitate subways and possibly wider streets. That is a worthy objective, but it must not be supposed that it can be attained simply by limiting all buildings in the downtown area to 110 feet or even 90 feet in height. Mr. Bartholomew found that the average height of buildings in the 110-foot district east of Sixteenth Street is only 4.7 stories. Since ten stories are permitted under the 110-foot limit, congestion of this area could be greatly intensified even under Mr. Delano's proposal.

Nor will mere height limitations provide the much needed space for automobile parking with which Mr. Delano is properly concerned. On the contrary, streets uniformly lined by buildings of seven or eight stories would leave even less parking space than is now available. More urgent than mere height limitations are modernized restrictions as to the percentage of any site that may be covered by brick and mortar. With such restrictions it is obvious that a 130-foot building would allow more room for parking and would provide better light and air than a 90-foot building of equal floor space on the same site.

It is unreasonable congestion that the city ought to avoid. There is no special virtue in eight-story, flat-topped structures in the business district. But there is an urgent need to prevent further congestion by means which, at the same time, will make Washington a more pleasant place in which to work and to live.

Angle On Hats

We have been waiting anxiously for the hat-eating which was pledged somewhat rashly by sundry dialecticians in connection with election chances. In the meantime we must be content with Mayor LaGuardia's example in eating his words about hats. The story has a certain intrinsic interest. Last spring Mayor LaGuardia became the center of a millinery controversy when he observed to a large fashion gathering that women's hats "weren't so good." He even said that they were designed by unpractical fellows who were quite ignorant of the principles of aerodynamics. Retaliatory questions as to the Mayor's qualifications to speak on female headgear came thick and fast. Some said he should stick to fighting f[illegible], and others thought the Little Flower was a better orchestral conductor than fashion expert. There were also those who cast aspersions on the Mayor's famous black sombrero, which he says has been his model for 30 years.

Now all has been made up. In a widely publicized visit to City Hall these same milliners presented the Mayor with their idea of a pretty hot number for his wife, and he agreed it would suit her. The hat was described as an ice blue turban "with a forward sweeping spiral effect of black Milan straw and a bunch of two-toned violets." Total result of the shattering controversy is that Mrs. LaGuardia has a new Easter bonnet, the Mayor has admitted publicly that he knows nothing about hats, and the milliners are all happy. If New York doesn't take Paris' place as the fashion center, it won't be its gallant Mayor's fault.

Two Of A Kind

The reported German proposal to mediate the Italo-Greek conflict is another reminder of the close parallel in German reactions to the wars in Greece and Finland. Both Italy and the Soviet Union are in different degrees in alliance with Nazi Germany. But such a fellowship didn't inhibit the Nazis from indulging in more than a little schadenfreude (or taking pleasure in another's misfortune) at the expense of the Soviet Union. Nor may the alliance with Italy stand in the way of Nazi satisfaction over the Greek drubbing of Italy, provided the drubbing doesn't become defeat.

This isn't due to any waste of sentiment in Nazi Germany over Finland or Greece. If there is one thing clear in this most complicated war, it is that sentiment plays no part in Nazi war-making, not even the peculiar German sentiment of schadenfreude. In Norway, for example, the German refugees who found succor in Norway in World War I constituted the Trojan horse when the Nazis decided to invade the Norse kingdom. Toward Finland the German tie was made much closer by the fact that during World War I the Germans helped the Finns cast off the Czarist yoke. Nevtheless, no memory of those days guided the Nazis in their attitude toward the Soviet-Finnish conflict. How best can we profit from the conflict? was the only question asked in the Wilhelmstrasse.

Clearly the Nazi interest was best served first by allowing the Soviet to get a good spanking. For the Soviet, and not Finland, is the challenger of Nazi Germany in the Baltic. Accordingly, the Germans let Italian material go through Germany en route to Finland, and even rendered some discreet aid themselves. When the news of this aid leaked out, to be sure, Berlin stopped it, but only for a time. Yet the Nazis couldn't permit the Soviet to be weakened so much that it would no longer be useful as a channel for raw materials. So the Germans, choosing the right time, eventually decided to intervene in Helsinki with a peace proposal. The Finns acted on their own in taking up peace negotiations, but the fact remains that the Germans for weeks before had been making overtures.

Toward Italy the German position appears to be little different. The Italian marriage to Berlin was as much a shotgun affair as the Russian liaison with Berlin. And nothing was more fantastic than Mussolini's hope that in the New Order in Europe he would have the say of a spouse. "A prince," warned Machiavelli, "ought to take care never to make an alliance with one more forceful than himself for the purpose of attacking others, because if he conquers you are at his discretion." Hitler believes that the "lesser" half in such partnerships, domestic or international, should restrict herself to children, home and the church. One day or other he would have applied to Italy just this advice. Such advice, obviously, would be less unpalatable when proffered to a chastened Italy. Greece (and Britain) is supplying that chastening, just as Finland supplied the chastening to Soviet Russia; and by this time both of the Fuehrer's partners have had enough experience to be thoroughly scared of Herr Hitler.

In this light the report of Berlin's peace overture to Greece, which is as humbling to Italy as it is flattering to little Hellas, assumes a certain plausibility. No doubt it will get nowhere with the fighting Greeks, now that they are assured of what the Finns could never hope to get—namely, British support. Hitler must know that. But, in addition to rubbing Mussolini's nose in the dirt, he's assured now that Italy's pretensions in the Near East, like Soviet pretensions in the Baltic, have been shrunk. He must try, it is true, to set up Humpty Dumpty again for his own purposes. And perhaps the setback to Italy has altered his Drang Nach Osten strategy. But the Near Eastern prize belongs to Nazi Germany in the New Order, and, if Mussolini doesn't know it, the "King's Men" (one of whom, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, has just resigned as Il Duce's chief of staff) do.

Looking Ahead

Few people are worrying today about the difficult adjustment problems that the United States will have to face when the defense program is completed and more normal economic conditions are reestablished. Indeed, the gravity of the emergency confronting the Nation makes it imperative to concentrate thought and effort upon the immediate task of arming for defense. We must be prepared to create additional productive facilities that may later on become superfluous and to train men for defense work that may soon cease to be essential. In times such as these, the future has to be left largely out of account in weighing the emergency needs of the present.

This does not mean, however, that no thought whatever should be given to the adjustment problems that will have to be faced when the defense program is a fait accompli. On the contrary, expert study of such problems is greatly needed. William L. Batt, member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, in a recent address before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, proposed that a board of planning and research be immediately set up to work out plans for easing the transition from the abnormal conditions created by the defense program to a more normal peacetime economy. It is certainly none too soon to begin thinking about how to utilize the excess capacity of defense industries in the years ahead and how to provide suitable jobs for men thrown out of work by completion of defense contracts.

Expert long-range planning of this kind should, of course, be carried on quite objectively and should not be permitted to delay or hamper defense preparations. By thus planning in advance the country will have a much better chance of realizing Mr. Batt's hopes of turning "defense-swollen capacity" to a "peacetime profit for the whole population."

Combating Strikes

The return to Washington of Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, as labor consultant to Secretary Stimson is generally regarded as a move to stave off enactment of antistrike legislation applicable to defense industries. Mr. McGrady has few peers as a conciliator, as shown by his successful mediation of particularly tough labor disputes during the turbulent years from 1934 to 1937. But neither he nor the able conciliators of the Department of Labor can prevent strikes and lockouts in defense industries unless the parties to a dispute voluntarily accept their offers to mediate, and voluntarily agree to abide by their decisions.

The labor leaders whom Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Commission, intends to place in various parts of the country as trouble-shooters must likewise rely solely upon their persuasive powers to avert warfare in the defense industries. In short, the peaceful settlement of disputes depends, in final analysis, upon the attitude of employers and employes.

Under existing emergency conditions it is not sufficient to provide machinery for settlement of disputes after work has been suspended. It is essential to bring the disputants together before an open break occurs. Otherwise there is danger that the defense program will be subjected to intolerable delays. In the Pacific Northwest numerous strikes in logging camps and lumber mills are now holding up orders for army cantonments and for aircraft factories. Moreover, it is taken for granted that the wage increases accorded the striking employes of the Vultee plant will be followed by similar demands from employes in other aircraft factories. If these demands should also lead to strikes, pressure for Government action to compel peaceful negotiation of all demands for wage increases or other concessions in defense industries will steadily increase, and may, indeed, overcome legislative reluctance to limit the right of organized labor to strike.

Although some Congressmen have suggested compulsory arbitration of disputes in defense industries, such an extreme measure would probably have little support. Furthermore, it is doubtful whether it would be an effective means of combating strikes. A much more practicable proposal has been brought forward in a bill introduced into the House by Representative Smith, providing for compulsory mediation of disputes in national defense industries. If a strike or lockout should be called during the mediation period, the President would be required to proclaim the fact and indicate that the offending party had "deliberately jeopardized the national defense by willfully disregarding the policy of Congress."

It has frequently been suggested that the system of compulsory mediation employed by the National Mediation Board to avert strikes and lockouts on the railroads should be extended to other industries. The success of mediation in case of the roads is due largely to the fact that the industry has been long organized, the unions are disciplined, and the roads accustomed to negotiating with them. Whether a similar system of compulsory mediation would work successfully if applied to miscellaneous defense industries is an open question. But if the strike epidemic should spread and hold up the defense program, doubts about the efficacy of Government intervention are likely to be resolved in favor of action.

CHILD BY THE SEA

This beach of snowy sand, the sea wind calling,
Invisible yet tangled in his hair,
The amber pools, moss-circled; the green seaweed
Upon a rocky stair.

Here the boy played alone yet was not lonely;
His were the ships that never touched the shore,
And his the gulls, the geese above the marshes . . .

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

"Into The Open"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some fine morning, and not so far in the future, the people of the United States, and the rest of the world, may be startled by the headlines of their morning papers.

These fateful headlines may read: England Has Surrendered! This would come when, and if, an incendiary bomb has stilled the voice of Britain's great "Atlas"—Winston Churchill, whose indomitable courage, in the face of wanton destructive forces, has been the inspiration and uplifting example for all those who believe nations can survive only through peace; not by force.

If the regretful Churchill tragedy (God forbid) should come, the remarkable morale he has kept alive would snap, and consternation, chaos and collapse would follow in Britain. Only the ashes of a once great nation would remain, to tell the story of a heroic people who tried in vain, to stem the tide that may overwhelm the whole world.

Why should not The United States at once sweep away the webs of blinding and hindering neutrality, and come out into the open as the avowed ally of Great Britain—the one democracy that stands between America—and what?

FRED D. JACOBS.
Alexandria, Va., Dec. 3.

Mr. Kennedy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner in The Post of December 5 on Mr. Kennedy's appeasement policy, has served to clear the atmosphere considerably.

Most Americans are keen enough to form a correct judgment upon local politicians, but when a Wall Street man is temporarily merged into a European embassy, a certain portion of the community remains bewildered as to his actual status and the import of his pronouncements.

The revealing truth as to whether an American representative remains true blue or not must be proved by the acid test of daily facts recorded by trustworthy journalists and borne out by the evidence of eyewitnesses.

For the light cast upon these records and evidence we thank "Capital Parade." ALICE E. FINLAY.
Washington, Dec. 5.

Payment In Kind

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is little doubt that this country should extend unlimited credit to Great Britain in this critical period. It seems quite unnecessary, however, to repeat our error of the past war in making loans without security.

The British Empire is the source of a number of materials of which the United States is a large importer, such as tin, felt, and rubber, any of which could be used for payment in kind without adverse effect on American industry.

America will owe a debt of gratitude to the patriotic citizens and the statesmen who safeguard the national investments essential to the defeat of the dictators.

THOMPSON O. LAWRENCE.
Fort Amador, C. Z., Dec. 1.

Impressive Greeting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to you as an average American citizen. I have no axe to grind. I represent no cause, faction or organization. I have nothing to gain.

But in common with millions of other liberty-loving Americans, I do have an interest in the brave British people who are fighting for democracy and against oppression and dictatorship.

And I want to do something about it! Here is my suggestion: Let the spirit of good will at the Christmas season prompt us Americans to spend some of our gift shopping money for products marked "Made in England," "Made in Scotland," "British Made"—or whatever the designation might be.

If adopted all over the United States, the aggregate would be impressive, helpful and a most convincing yuletide greeting to the courageous British in their battle for life.

In the light of the true Christmas spirit, I am sure that our patriotic labor leaders, manufacturers and merchants would be willing to cooperate. And we should not be unmindful of the fact that Britain is spending—and will spend—hundreds of millions of dollars in our country.

CHARLES H. EYLES.
Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 4.

Qualification Method

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To me the saddest thing about the whole campaign is the fact that when John L. Lewis made the statement that he would resign as C. I. O. chieftain if President Roosevelt was reelected, he did not qualify that statement, with something like: unless someone else wants the office, or unless someone says something adverse to my views.

If Mr. Lewis had done this it would not only have granted him an unchallenged privilege to have employed his eloquent oratorical persuasion in the retention of his C. I. O. presidential office at the recent C. I. O. election assembly, but, if other similiar examples mean anything, it would have also assured his easy victory in the final voting.

The other similiar examples I have reference to are the famous "unless I am drafted" and "unless there is a falsification of the records" qualifications. In the unhappy event the "unless we are attacked" qualification should be fulfilled, that will have been a perfect score for the qualification method, at least, up until the present time.

J. J. SPERRY.
Woodstock, Va., Nov. 23.

Some Postwar Possibilities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much thought is now being given to the shape of things to come in the world after the present war. It is none too soon to begin to plan for the restoration of some tolerable order in international relations after the terrible conflict is ended. On the economic side it is now possible to envisage at least four alternative situations in the postwar world.

In the first place, the existing international chaos of disrupted trade, blockades, and lost markets may continue more or less indefinitely. If the war results in a stalemate, matters might drift along with half or more of the world in a state of semistarvation and the other half enjoying relative abundance. Such a situation would be a menace to the so-called "have" nations that remained after the war, for their comparative well-being would excite the envy of the others and give rise to designs upon them. It would also arouse the sympathy of the American people who would probably take steps to mitigate the plight of starving Europe, both on humanitarian grounds and to create a more friendly weather of world opinion toward the political and social institutions of Western democracy

A second conceivable postwar alternative is based upon the assumption of a German victory. It envisages the possible division of the world into a series of regional monopolies whose economic and political life would be dominated in each case by some master nation: Germany in Europe, Britain in what remained of the empire, Russia in western Asia, Japan in eastern and southern Asia, and the United States in the Western Hemisphere.

A third alternative contemplates the possibility of a return to something like historic liberalism and the international division of labor in the event of a British victory. It assumes the cooperation of the English-speaking peoples in a kind of welfare imperialism designed to effect a more equitable distribution of the world's resources in accordance with human needs. It recognizes the existing unequal distribution of the material, human, and social resources of mankind and aims to promote their more even division.

This alternative would be implemented by the international planning of foreign trade, finance, investment, public works and social services. It would apply to Mexico, South America, India and the so-called backward countries of the world the same techniques of land-use planning, agricultural adjustment, soil conservation, flood control, navigation and power development that are being employed by the AAA and the TVA to create a more balanced and prosperous economy in the Southeastern part of the United States.

It is conceivable, in the fourth place, regardless of the outcome of the war, that the American people, who enjoy a high degree of self-sufficiency would weary of "holding the bag" for the rest of the world. Political and social policies aside, they might come to feel, as many of them already do, that we should take care of our own impoverished and underprivileged millions in the urban and rural slums of America before investing, loaning or granting billions of dollars to help the victims of foreign wars.

Advocates of this "open door at home" policy argue that there are greater potential markets at home than abroad, that our first duty is to our own needy fellow citizens, and that the solution of the "surplus" problem is to be found in an expansion of domestic markets and higher levels of living here in the United States rather than in the vain quest for permanent outlets for our putative "surpluses" in foreign sales aided and abetted either by seapower or export subsidies or imperialist adventures: welfare or otherwise

These are the alternatives, it now appears, that will face the world after the war. Liberal opinion in England is working for Anglo-American cooperation in the reconstruction of a better world order. Liberal opinion in the United States is divided between the third and fourth lines of action. Our national interest would seem to lie in some combination of, or compromise between, these last two choices.

David Goes To Sunday School

IT IS A MONTH since 10-year-old David came to us from England. We wondered at first how Charles, an only child, would react to this newcomer in the family circle. Fortunately, they took to one another on sight, and in spite of the difference in environment and upbringing are entirely congenial, especially in the little things that really count.

David is rather reserved, but well-mannered and genuinely anxious to learn American ways and to do the proper thing. Some of our customs he finds puzzling. When anything strikes him as particularly strange he inquires into it with a gravity and a shrewdness of observation that is highly intriguing.

Last week Sunday school opened. It developed that David had never been to one. He blushed and looked embarrassed when the matter was broached.

"In England, only the Board School children go," he explained, "not people like us."

It seems that in the paying private and "public" schools to which parents of the intellectual and professional classes send their young, the children learn their Bible stories in kindergarten, and later study Scripture as a classroom lesson on the same footing as English, history, mathematics, or any other subject in the curriculum. In the free, or "Board" schools, however, which are compulsory, there is no religious instruction of any kind, for freedom of worship is a well-guarded reality in the tight little isle.

The result is one of those subtle class distinctions of English democracy. The children of the poor go to Sunday school. The children of the well-to-do, having presumably learned their catechism at a suitable price, go to the regular Sunday morning church worship.

To David, child of a professor, it obviously seemed distinctly infra dig. to be asked to attend Sunday school.

AS THE children start going to church before they are old enough to read the words of the hymns and long before they can understand the prayers, it is apt to seem pretty tedious, we gathered from David's description. Although he has evidently been very carefully brought up, and says his prayers faithfully and fervently every night, it was evident that church-going was not one of the things he did most enthusiastically. Nevertheless, he seemed to think it would be preferable to Sunday school.

"If you don't mind, I'd rather go to church with you, please," he said. "I used to go every week with my father and mother."

"Er, we don't happen to be going today," my husband stammered, hastily tucking his feet, in heavy golf shoes, under his chair, but not before David's eyes had flickered over them with a look of complete understanding.

He listened politely but with a resigned expression as Henry explained the advantages of our system.

"You'll have a good time at Sunday school," Henry wound up breezily. "This is a truly democratic country, you know. No distinctions. Rich and poor all go together. All the boys and girls your age will be there."

David perked up. "Elijah and ones like that?" he asked.

He is very curious about Elijah, the son of our laundress.

"WELL . . . I expect Elijah goes to his own church," Henry countered

"I say," David's eyes shone with sudden interest, "do the natives here have temples and gongs and things like the natives in India?"

"Silly," said Charles, "they're not natives. They were just brought here a long time ago."

"Whatever for . . .

At this point Henry interrupted hastily to bring the conversation back to the matter in hand. He was gentle but firm. David would go with Charles at 9:30.

He had one last flicker of hope.

"If you were bad, would they send you home from Sunday school?" he asked mildly.

Henry almost fell into that. Warned by a curious gleam in Charles' eyes, I kicked my husband under the table just in time.

Of course they . . . er, no, I'm afraid if you were that bad they'd keep you in longer to work over you," Henry finished quickly.

A FEW minutes later Henry gave each of the boys his dime for the collection. Clean and shining, they departed, David evidently wanting to do the right thing, but far from happy about it.

From behind the curtain I watched them as they went down the front steps togther. I was proud of Charles, sedately leading his new friend in the paths of righteousness.

My son's voice floated up to me through the window.

"One good thing," he observed comfortably, "they always pay you a dime to go. The Sunday school takes a nickel off you, but that still leaves you 5 cents for refreshments."

Labor And Defense

By Anna P. Youngman

Facts About Demand And Supply

We are currently hearing a great deal about labor disputes that have held up production in plants with defense contracts. Very little has been said, however, about the unspectacular but very important work of governmental agencies in furnishing information about the supply of and demand for labor in connection with the defense program.

We are singularly fortunate in having for the first time in our history extensive and reliable data on the labor market, derived from the records of the public employment offices. While they do not have a complete record of all unemployed persons, they do cover all workers in insured occupations, since registry at the exchanges is made a condition for receipt of benefits.

Last April the Federal Bureau of Employment Security, of which the United States Employment Service is now a subordinate division, took an inventory of its active files of registered unemployed, totaling 5,100,000 job seekers. This inventory affords the only comprehensive information that we now have on the country's labor supply. However, the rapid changes in employment needs resulting from the defense program have necessitated more detailed, up-to-date information about the registered unemployment in certain essential defense occupations. Over 500 separate occupations are, therefore, being currently covered in monthly surveys.

The public employment offices also send representatives to visit employers in selected defense industries every month to determine their labor requirements during the following 60-day period and to obtain detailed specifications concerning the kind of labor needed. About 30,000 employers in key industries such as machinery, chemicals, aircraft and shipbuilding are covered by these means. The State employment services also transmit to the FBES confidential statements relating to problems of labor shortages, competition between employers for the services of labor, the effect of the draft upon the local labor supply and other matters. Special labor surveys are made on request for the Defense Commission, the United States Housing Authority, and other Government agencies.

The offices of the affiliated State employment services likewise refer men on their register to the proper authorities for enrollment in vocational training courses for the defense program. Subsequently they try to place the trainees in permanent jobs. Some of the selections for training are made on the basis of previous experience; others, on the basis of personal aptitude.

The FBES has recently inaugurated a Nation-wide system of regional labor clearances. If the local employment office or other offices in the State are unable to meet demands for particular kinds of labor from their registries they apply to regional offices set up by the Federal agency. It is thus hoped to build up a Nation-wide system of labor clearances that will assure the fullest possible utilization of local labor, and prevent needless migration of jobseekers.

While the public employment services are dealing with the demand and supply factors that affect the labor market from day to day, the Department of Labor is trying to estimate the amount of labor needed over long periods of time to complete the work which Congress has authorized under defense appropriation acts. Obviously these estimates will have to be revised whenever Congress votes funds for more projects. The Division of Construction and Public Employment, for instance, has estimated the number of man-hours of work that will be required each month over a period of several years in different industrial areas to finish work in building construction, naval vessels and other projects.

For certain types of projects such as naval vessels and for defense construction jobs similar to those on which WPA labor has been employed, such as airports, there is a mass of recorded data available for analysis on which to base estimates of the amount of labor needed. In cases where new types of defense work are being undertaken, preliminary investigations and conferences with industrialists will be necessary.

Even this cursory survey of the work that is being done by the experts of the Employment Service and the Department of Labor indicates that they are prepared to furnish the basic facts about labor supply and demand which are so essential to effective utilization of the country's labor force. The work that these agencies are doing today to assist the economic mobilization of manpower for national defense is valuable chiefly because it is the outcome of years of effort by Government experts in the permanent departments. It would have been impossible to create an emergency fact-finding organization capable of supplying the essential information about the labor market which is now available to the advisory defense organization for labor headed by Sidney Hillman.

However, knowledge of conditions, valuable though it is, provides no assurance that the labor market will escape the disturbances and dislocations created by new demands growing directly and indirectly out of the defense program. The Government has no power to compel employers to hire workers through the public employment exchanges. Indeed, some employers have a prejudice against doing so, although that attitude is said to be fast disappearing. All the authorities can do is to try to persuade employers that it is to their interest to recruit labor through the public employment offices.

There is, moreover, nothing to prevent employers from luring skilled workers away from other employers by offers of higher wages, however short-sighted such conduct may appear to be. Where labor shortages and contracts on hand have to be rushed to completion, there is a great temptation for employers to outbid each other in this way. There is also nothing to prevent employers from hiring their labor in distant parts of the country instead of clearing their demands through the State and regional offices of the public employment services.

Similarly the Government has put no checks upon the free movement of labor. Workers may disregard official advice and migrate to already congested centers if they choose. They may accept employment in nondefense industries manufacturing nonessential goods even if defense industries are slowed down because of labor shortages. Yet Government officials feel no immediate anxiety about our ability to deal with the labor problems of defense. They argue that with millions still unemployed and with unused industrial productive capacity still available, expansion of production can go forward in both defense and nondefense industries without surrender of the free labor policies which are the distinguishing mark of an unregimented democratic order.

It is too soon to say whether this optimism is well founded. Certainly we have made an inauspicious start, with strikes holding up defense contracts, and demands for wage increases coming thick and fast. It is hard for firms working on Government orders to resist such demands for wage increases; indeed the pecuniary incentive to resist is weakened if not destroyed when additions to wage costs can be shifted to the Government.

If labor unions should succeed in securing substantial increases in wage rates at this time without compensating increases in productivity, production costs will mount and the prices of finished goods will rise with them. As the movement spreads—and it inevitably will unless checked in its incipiency—living costs will likewise rise. The advance will be accelerated by higher money wages which increase the effective consumer demand for goods. The stability of the price structure is more immediately threatened by premature wage advances than by any other factor.

Charles O. Hardy in his recently published book, "Wartime Control of Prices," points out that "a successful drive on the part of labor organizations toward a general increase in wages in advance of a corresponding rise in other parts of the national income, such as occurred in 1937, would wreck any plans for waging a war without inflation."

Strikes in defense industries have already resulted in demands for compulsory arbitration of disputes without suspension of operations while negotiations are proceeding. Insertion of an arbitration clause in the agreement between the Vultee Aircraft Corporation and its striking employes after a prolonged struggle may possibly lead to similar agreements that will afford greater protection against strikes.

The Department of Labor has estimated that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 more workers will be employed in defense industries by the end of 1941 and that an additional 2,000,000 jobs will be created in nondefense industries due to the increased buying power of an augmented labor force. Already rising industrial activity has been reflected in increased purchases of goods by consumers. Welcome as this increase in consumer purchasing power is, it presents another problem to those who are trying to mobilize our resources in man power and material for defense purposes.

Even though the demand for labor may fall short of absorbing all the unemployed, it will create labor shortages in certain skilled lines. These have already appeared here and there and may become acute in the near future. Hence it is necessary to train men to supply the needed skill and to meet the requirements in the supply of certain kinds of labor. It is also important to prevent workers from going in too great numbers into consumer industries of a luxury or semi-luxury character. In fact, if wages should rise too rapidly, it might become necessary to curb consumer spending either by rationing of scarce commodities or by heavy consumer taxes designed to restrict buying.

Officials who are directing the defense program are aware of the difficulties of the course they have charted. But they hope by persuasion to avoid depriving employers and workers of their freedom of action. Despite the desirability of avoiding compulsion, the experience of the past causes one to doubt whether we can make the extensive adjustments required by the defense program without establishing fairly rigid controls over wages as well as over the labor policies of the industries employing labor.

To the Greeks

I

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
They scorned big machines or a "plan."
And showed to a badly scared world
There still can be fights, man to man;
One terrible stiff kick in the pants
They give to the law "Might makes right,"
And flashed to a darkening world
A steadying, rallying light.

II

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
When bullies crashed in and said "Boo!"
They didn't seem craven at all—
They even missed out on their cue;
They gave to a skeptical world
A tonic, a shot and a brace.
And showed that in war's modern mold
The spirit of man has a place.

III

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
When threatened and told what to do
They didn't lie down and play dead—
They answered the foeman, "Sez you!"—
They knew how "the terror" had spread—
They'd watched as their sister states ran,
But, facing the mechanized force,
They fought as a man fights a man!

IV

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
They didn't yell, "This is no use!"
They didn't cry, "Look at those tanks!
Let's scram till they fix up a truce!"
They heard the foe bellow his threats,
And leer, "You are now on the spot!"—
And, acting the part of free men,
Flung back the retort, "Maybe not!"

V

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
The tales of the mechanized force
Had reached them for many a month;
They know of the "blitzkrieg" of course;
States big and states small they'd seen fall;
They knew the expedient way,
And yet, with the courage of old,
They plunged, man by man, to the fray!

VI

My bonnet is off to the Greeks—
Who heard the old stuff from their foes:
"Bow down! For you know what you'll get
If ever you dare to oppose!"
Yet, holding to one mighty truth—
"Our cause is a just one and right!"
Went in with the weapons of old,
And, what is more, put up a fight!

New Migrants Springing Up In Defense Work, Inquiry Told

Camps Mushrooming Near Army Projects and Industrial Centers Are Declared Presenting New Problem

By James D. Secrest

The scramble for national defense jobs is resulting in a new problem, the migrant industrial workman, the House Committee Investigating Interstate Migration was told yesterday.

"Migration of workers to centers of new industrial activity," said Fred R. Rauch, acting commissioner of the Federal Works Agency, "is changing the character of the migration problem considerably.

"During the next few months a great deal less will be heard of farm migrations and a great deal more of the large group of persons moving into the centers of greatly increased industrial activity resulting directly and indirectly from the defense armament program."

Rauch and Mrs. Roberta Williams, of the National Travelers Aid Association, New York, called the attention of the committee to deplorable living conditions of defense workers and persons in search of jobs.

Mushroom Growths

The mushroom growths in the neighborhood of army cantonments, resulting from influxes of labor, have created serious problems of housing, health and sanitation, Rauch said. The larger cities seem able to absorb the abrupt additions to population with less difficulty.

"Army cantonments are frequently located near small communities which are totally unprepared to meet the needs of the new residents," he explained.

"Housing and restaurant facilities are lacking, unreasonable prices for poor shelter and food prevail, and workers live in automobiles, shacks, or other improvised quarters. The sanitation problem is a great danger to public health."

Mrs. Williams described the camp of 3,000 workers in a patch of woods at Camp Blanding, Fla., where many persons slept on the ground with only a blanket to cover them in a 22-degree temperature. When the camp became unlivable because of lack of sanitation facilities, she said, the migrants moved elsewhere.

Present Health Problem

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, in a paper submitted to the committee, said that "destitute citizens who migrate from State to State have a greater degree of ill health and, with the exception of beneficiaries of the Federal Government, receive less medical care than that experienced by other needy citizens.

Dr. Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., who is a visiting minister at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Connecticut Avenue and N Street, startled the committee somewhat when he appeared as unscheduled witness to blame the church for failing to recognize the migration problem.

"The church is virtually asleep on this question," he said. "It is distinctly a spiritual problem because it concerns the stranger in our midst."

Dr. Carruthers suggested that a convocation be held under the auspices of all denominations to consider the matter and proposed that the ministers of recognized national churches in Washington form a committee to study the problem.

Move into the churches of Washington and open the eyes of the blind," he advised the committee.

WPA Held Necessary

Rauch, who was questioned at length by the committee regarding the WPA, disclosed that a supplemental WPA appropriation will be asked early in the next Congress. He stated that the national defense industries are not employing unskilled labor to any great degree.

Rauch predicted that a Federal works program will be necessary "for some time to come" to absorb the unemployed, and pointed out that the labor supply of the United States gains about 600,000 yearly, chiefly from the youth, while technological progress reduces employment opportunities.

He disagreed with Representative Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois, however, that "a holiday" should be declared on technological improvements. History has shown, he said, that new inventions produce new industries, and international competition makes it essential that industry operate with maximum efficiency.

A statement prepared by J. W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, outlining the problems of education, brought on by mass migration, was read. Among other witnesses heard was Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby.

The hearing will be in recess until Monday, when the effect of national defense employment on migration will be considered.

Belgian Pavilion Of Fair Is Given To Va. University

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—Remember the Belgian pavilion at the New York World's Fair?

Well, you'll have an opportunity to see the central portion of the $700,000 structure again within the next ten months—this time on the campus of Virginia Union University in Richmond.

Dr. William J. Clark, president of the university, announced yesterday the major portion of the pavilion had been given to the institution and would be reassembled on the campus to provide space needed for a library, auditorium and other facilities.

The pavilion was to have been shipped back to Belgium for use as a college at the conclusion of the fair, but Germany's invasion of Belgium rendered this plan impossible of execution. Rather than sell the structure for scrap, representatives of the Belgian government in this country offered it to any college or university capable of accepting it for use.

Virginia Union University, one of the leading educational institutions for colored in the South, has a student body of 650.

V. P. I. Airport To Get $273,374 Defense Project

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—Virginia WPA headquarters announced today a certified national defense project at the Virginia Tech Airport, Blacksburg, to cost $273,374.

The project, which will give work to 397 men for six months, provides for the paving of a 150-foot strip of the 500-foot-wide east-west runways for a distance of 3,215 feet with penetration macadam; surfacing of the remaining area for the same distance with stone and calcium stabilization, and grading of the north-south runway for a distance of 2,960 feet. Installation of drainage and construction of parking spaces and fences also is included in the project.

Work will begin December 9, WPA officials said. V. P. I. will contribute $53,937 and the WPA $219,437.

Fair Enough

Sen. Johnson Is Right

A DISPATCH from San Francisco quotes Senator Hiram Johnson as having said that "there is no doubt" that the United States will enter the war. The Senator is right. The people voted on that question a few weeks ago, after a campaign in which both candidates spoke practically alike on the issue of war—an issue slightly disguised as full aid to Britain "short of war," and Mr. Willkie, at times, was forced to hop up his utterances lest his German ancestry be held against him.

Both candidates hurled defiance at Adolf Hitler, and while it is true that some of the Willkie following hoped that he would be able to stand off actual participation or stand it off longer than President Roosevelt might, thus gaining time for rearmament, there was no substantial footing for either hope. President Roosevelt was scolded for his belligerency, but did not talk back, and finally won a popular victory over an opponent who differed on the issue only in the imagination of the people. Willkie's acceptance address should have dispelled all doubt, for in that portion of his speech which dealt with the war he was just as tough as Mr. Roosevelt and seemed to be pouring it on for the considered purpose of showing how tough he would be if he were President.

WHAT ELSE is the United States arming for but for war against the dictator who has openly proclaimed his hostility to the plutocratic nations and has attempted to encircle this one with powerful enemies of similar mind? Hitler was sighting down the barrel at this country in those expressions, and it would be foolish to hope that, having conquered Britain and finding the United States still incompletely armed and still inept in the use of the arms in hand, he would then make kindly overtures to a nation whose President was elected on the record which Mr. Roosevelt had established.

There is plenty in that record to date, including the sale of the destroyers to Britain, to provide Hitler with an excuse for war against the U. S. A., and it will be remembered that the American people not only gave that deal their enthusiastic indorsement but, by their vote, approved the method of it, which was questionable.

THE LITTLE HITCH over the matter of tick or credit for Britain in the purchase of war tools here will be settled without too much parley. Possibly, by haggling while there is still time, the British will be forced to let go Bermuda and some other toeholds in American waters, but, one way or another, a nation so far committed as this one against such a dangerous enemy will find a way to furnish ships, engines, planes and other war material without any other limit than the American capacity to produce, minus home requirements.

No doubt these transactions will be called sales for book purposes, but past experience under more favorable conditions shows the futility of hoping to collect. Even with victory, the British would be so badly broke and shot up at the end of this war that any settlement of debts by orthodox methods would be laughable. This means that, in the long run, the American people will pay for the material which Britain receives on credit, and there is no reason to think that Willkie would have done otherwise.

PARTICIPATION might not include the presence of an expeditionary force. It will be remembered that both candidates told the people that they would send no troops to Europe, but there was a catch in that. The requirements don't include troops, and, anyway, the situation is so precarious that an American expedition might be caught in a defeated and hostile country.

If the British hadn't escaped at Dunkerque they would have found themselves attacked by their late friends, the French, after the surrender. But in a state of war this country would suspend temporarily, hoping to get it back some day, much of the freedom of our present state and go under discipline to produce results that are not being obtained now and cannot be obtained under our traditional system. Without a state of war, everything lags.

The only man who has made a conspicuous appeal for a policy of impartial detachment is Col. Lindbergh, who was howled down not only when he spoke but on election day when the people repudiated his optimistic belief that a victorious Axis would let this Nation be.

Given a choice between two tough-talking candidates for President, they picked the one whose talk was slightly more belligerent and whose record even then was one of informal or disguised participation in the form of aid to Hitler's enemy.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America and a Negotiated Peace

ALTHOUGH A NUMBER of trial balloons have been sent up and some diplomatic feelers extended through nonbelligerent capitals, under present conditions a negotiated peace is not possible. This is not to say that peace can never be negotiated between Britain and Germany but simply that it cannot be negotiated by the British democracy and the Nazi regime. On one side or the other—either in Britain or in Germany—the indispensable prelude to a serious negotiation is a revolutionary change of regime.

That this is very clearly understood in Great Britain was shown on Thursday when the House of Commons voted 341 to 4 against a proposal to negotiate. Over here, where the realities of the war are dim and vague to many, this vote may seem to some an evidence of stubbornness, even of suicidal stubbornness. But we shall do well to remember that the British are a people with a good deal of common sense, and a long political experience, and a genius for compromise when a compromise is feasible. And if they are convinced that a negotiated compromise is not now possible, the chances are that they understand the position more clearly than do those who live safely at a distance.

A NEGOTIATED PEACE today would mean accepting the fact that Hitler's airforce and submarine fleet continued to be based upon the countries nearest to England—on Norway, Belgium, Holland, and France. Even if Hitler agreed to evacuate these countries, their armies are shattered, their economic systems are dislocated, whereas he still possesses perhaps 200 divisions which could in a day or two reoccupy these countries. Therefore, over the negotiated settlement there would hang perpetually the threat of a renewal of the Blitzkrieg.

The crucial question, therefore, is how a negotiated peace could be set up so that the British people would not have to have their air defenses and their air raid shelters perpetually ready. For it has been demonstrated in Norway and Belgium that a country can be surprised and knocked out literally in a few hours. Presumably, if the British negotiated, they could receive Hitler's written promise not to attack them some night when the moon is bright. That would not be very reassuring. What other guaranty could they get? The answer to that question will throw light on a very dark patch where in many American minds light is badly needed.

FOR THE ANSWER is that a Britain which negotiated with Hitler today could purchase some sense of security only by doing what Mr. Laval is trying to do in France—by setting up a government in London which was so useful to Hitler that he would not wish to attack it. On that basis, and on no other, a negotiated peace is today theoretically conceivable. But a British government which Hitler found so useful that he would not attack it would obviously have to be a government radically different from any that Britons have ever known. It would have to be totalitarian. It would have to put an end to freedom of the press so that no Englishmen could criticize the new order; an end to Parliament so that the new British government could not be overthrown; an end to economic freedom because British industry, shipping, and finance would have to be coordinated with Hitler's new economic system in Europe. In order to have security against the Blitzkrieg, the British Isles would have to join Hitler, not merely cease to fight him. In order to join him, the British would have to revolutionize their political and economic system. In order to revolutionize it, they would have to kill off, exile, or put into concentration camps all the conservative, liberal, and labor leaders who objected to the revolution.

Even then a new European order under Nazi dominion would not be workable. For the continent of Europe plus the British Isles is a great workshop which must be supplied with raw materials from the rest of the world. The coordination of industrial Britain with industrial Germany in one great system is a conceivable arrangement only if a totalitarian Europe has a great overseas empire in which it is the undisputed master of the market. A British government which had destroyed democracy and free enterprise by revolution would in the nature of things have to conspire with Hitler,—in part to feed its own people and even more to divert Nazi Germany away from Britain—in order to dominate Africa, South America, and the colonial areas of the southern Pacific.

TO PUT THE MATTER quite bluntly—only a totalitarian government in Britain could appease Hitler and the obvious things it could appease him with are the rich, undeveloped, and badly defended regions which interest the United States. The backseat drivers in this country who for one reason or another would like to persuade Britain to make a treaty of appeasement with Hitler do not seem to have realized that such a treaty can be made only at the expense of the vital interests of the United States. If as the trial balloons and feelers already suggest, Hitler would like to offer Britain a peace which leaves the British Empire intact, where is Hitler to make an empire for himself? The crowded continent of Europe is not an empire: it is merely the base from which an empire can be conquered. Africa is something but in fact mighty little. But South America and the colonial regions of the Pacific are an empire, and once a totalitarian Britain came to terms with Nazi Germany, the inevitable and natural consequence would be to take possession of that empire.

The trouble with our backseat drivers—be they humanitarian or worried about their money—is that they fail to realize that if Britain were to give in to Hitler now, the Britain they have known would have to disappear and would have to be replaced by a Britain which in its own interest, for its own subsistence and its own survival, would have to collaborate with totalitarian Europe against the United States. These well-meaning but misguided people may imagine that the Britain which negotiated a peace would be once more the Britain of Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain and Sir John Simon—with the Churchills gone and the Labor Party, which has so terrified Mr. Mark Sullivan, out of power again. But they are mistaken. The Britain which negotiated a peace now would be a Britain ruled by men whom we have never heard of and they would not be our friends. For just as Mr. Laval tries to justify his subservience to Hitler by arousing hatred against Britain, so a government of surrender in London would justify itself by arousing hatred against America.

THEN MR. KENNEDY would have something substantial to worry about. For in the new British regime democracy would indeed be finished and national socialism would not be a rhetorical bogey but a tremendous reality.

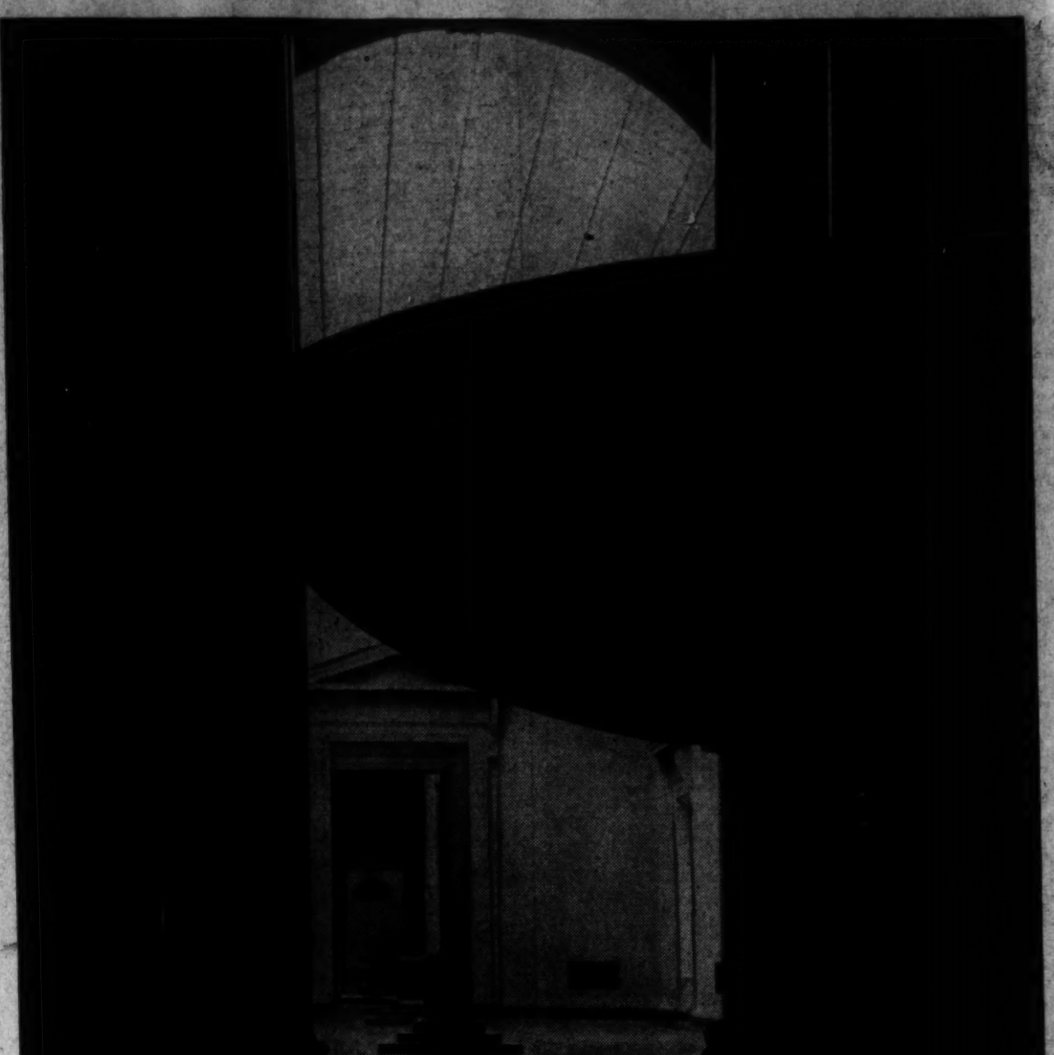
MALL ENTRANCE TO NATIONAL ART GALLERY



VIEW FROM BENEATH FOUNTAIN IN ROTUNDA

Gallery May Open in March

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Its vast marble exterior glistening in the sun, the National Gallery of Art was virtually ready yesterday to receive its "stock"—a treasury of paintings and sculptures which is actually priceless but, if a money figure is essential, $75,000,000 couldn't buy.

An inspection of the building which the late Andrew W. Mellon erected for the United States, at a cost of $15,000,000, revealed that it is just about ready for occupancy, save for the usual odds and ends of trimming, checking and last-minute changes of a minor nature.

By late March the gallery is expected to be open to the public. The next three and a half months will be consumed in completing structural work and interior decoration and arranging for transfer and reception of the famous Mellon and Kress art collections, which will form the nucleus of an art center which may be compared with the Louvre and the Metropolitan.

PUBLIC CAFETERIA ON GROUND FLOOR

All that remains to complete the impressive Italian marble-columned rotunda is installation of the famous bronze figure of Mercury, by Giovanni da Bologna, upon the marble fountain which is already in place.

In the east and west exhibition halls, leading off the rotunda, two pedestals each have been installed and are awaiting their sculptural burdens. Statues of Venus and Bacchus will be placed in the west hall, but no announcement has been made as to the two central sculptures which will go in the east hall.

Upon being opened, the gallery will be administered as a unit of the Smithsonian Institution. Members of its board of trustees will be the Chief Justice of the United States, chairman; the Secretaries of State and of the Treasury, the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, F. Lammot Belin, Duncan Phillips, Mr. Bruce, Mr. Widener and Mr. Kress. Architects of the new building are John Russell Pope, Daniel Paul Higgins and Otto R. Eggers, of New York. Builder is the Vermilya-Brown Co., New York.

Happy Wife Advises 'Fleur' That Illicit Amour Quickly Burns Itself Out; That Mutual Awareness Of Protective Devotion Begets Lasting Love

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Fleur," published in Wednesday's column, inspires me to write an answer to her and to all girls in a similar position. Before my marriage I did a good deal of counseling of young girls, as part of my work. When they asked me about pre-marital sex relations, I gave them the conventional answers, because I knew no others. But now that I know more about sexual expression of love, I should like to explain things better.

My husband and I were past our first youth when we married. Neither of us had ever had sex relations, and we thought we had shown remarkable self-control to deny ourselves such "bliss" for moral reasons! Now we laugh at ourselves for having thought such a thing. For we know that sexual love is an expression of our rational love for—and confidence in—each other, and that, without deeply affectionate mutual trust, we should not be "lovers" in the literal sense.

Only the most animalistic natures feel passion just as a physiological demand—like thirst. In the balanced personality, the emotion comes and goes—and it goes very quickly under unfavorable circumstances. Perhaps I can illustrate what I mean. I look at my husband and think: "This is my dear husband, who thinks it is a privilege to wear old clothes, and eat hamburger steak and go walking for amusement—so that he can be married to me. This is the man who spent long hours cooking, and nursing me when I was ill, and who swears he will love me even more when I am a homely old lady than he does today."

Then I feel such an upsurge of emotion, inspired by him because of all he is, that I can hardly bear it. But if I had to think, "This is the man who wants to get everything he can from me, without giving anything in return; the man who is willing to let me take a chance on becoming pregnant, just in order to satisfy his 'desire'; who would put me in the position of being looked down on by 'respectable' people, while he keeps in the clear where he can 'skip out' when he pleases—" I would feel more like shooting him than loving him.

A young divorcee once told me that "passion isn't all it's cracked up to be." I didn't know what she meant at the time. But I understand now. She had been married to a selfish, worthless man, and she couldn't help feeling cold and indifferent to him. "Fleur" would soon feel the same toward her young man—with a great deal more cause for complaint than the divorcee whose remarks I have quoted.

"Fleur" would have additional hazards to love. Having to be secretive; having to sneak off to be with the man; living in constant fear of pregnancy, knowing she could never go frankly to a doctor and get his advice; feeling herself cheated of a wedding and gifts from loving friends; never being able to entertain mutual friends in a cozy little home—what chance would her "passion" have to survive? Heartache and love-hunger would be her portion.

A letter on a subject so deeply emotional is hard to write, but I hope I have made myself clear, and that my effort will be of some value to "Fleur" and to all girls who are confronting a similar choice. Sincerely yours,

HAPPY WIFE.

Listen to Mary Haworth over Station WJSV Saturday morning at 9:15, discussing problems from her daily mail.

Such Plain Speaking Is Very Helpful

DEAR H. W.: Thank you for a very fine letter. I appreciate the courage required to lay aside reserve for another's benefit. Your illustration of the whys and wherefores of bonafide "passion" is as illuminating, in its forceful simplicity, as any I have ever read. I believe you are doing "Fleur"—and all other girls similarly confused—an inestimable service in speaking out, as you have.

Girl Says "Slap Man's Face And Show Him the Door"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Bravo to you!—for advising "Fleur" to stay away from the man who, while claiming to love her, wants all the "consolations" of marriage without legally pledging himself to accept its moral and social responsibilities as well.

Only recently, I was in "Fleur's" boots. I loved the man with all my heart. I worshipped him, in fact. And he loved me—so he said. And he wanted to marry me, of course—but unfortunately something always intervened. His family, my family, his job, my job, and, finally, the draft. The draft was his trump card.

In the meantime, he couldn't understand why I wouldn't belong to him completely. If I loved him, so his theme song ran, I would deny him nothing. But I happen to cherish a lot of "romantic notions" (his term for my feeling) about love. I know that its course is not always as smooth as cream. But I also know—from fact and fiction—that when a man really loves a woman, he will literally go through fire and water for her.

That's the sort of love I'm looking for, and if I don't find it, I can always take up knitting. So that's why I urge "Fleur" to follow your recommendations, and, in addition, to do what I did: slap the man's face and show him the door. The men with long faces and whining dispositions never conquer the world.

PENNY.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Magic for a Black Dress

Right at this time of year a dramatic necklace is a particularly nice gift to brighten up a "good" dress that has worn well all season. Looking toward spring, a light touch is always welcome to give you the "fever" that accompanies the first bird on the limb. Pearls are typical of one kind of jewelry that is popular with women this Christmas. The halyard of pearls, above, makes an ideal husband-to-wife gift. The rope of pearls and glittering stones strung on a golden chain, is fully 2 yards long. It winds about the throat over a simple black dress. The ring, 12 carat size, is unusually faceted, giving it depth and glitter. Equally appealing are necklaces of dull and shiny gold and silver, or a combination of both. Diamonds adorn jewels in every shape and form—one of special favor being the bow knot. Christmas shoppers play special court to massive loops and twists, in sinister dull gold and silver. Romantic moonstones cast their spell over the fancy of hopeful lovers. For something different, pastel stones catch and hold the light magically

A Woman's WASHINGTON

Wives of Redskins Will Be Glad When Final Game Ends Grid Season's 'Curfew Hours'

ONE GROUP of Redskin fans to whom professional football is the most important of all sports, nevertheless will welcome tomorrow's playoff game and the end of the season. They're the wives of the players. Mrs. Charlie Malone puts it this way: "I love football; I enjoy seeing the games, but I'll be glad when our lives get back to normal." During the season, their evenings end at 11 o'clock so the athlete in the family can get his sleep. "What's wotse," she adds, "on Friday and Saturday, when you're kind of kinky-haired and want to Do Things, you have to be home by 10:30."

Chief topic of conversation among the Redskins' squaws is the probable outcome of the game with the Chicago Bears. "If we win, the team goes to Los Angeles for an exhibition game," Mrs. "Turk" Edwards explains. "I'm from the West, so it means I'll be home for Christmas. Some of the players may buy cars and drive home, or take a vacation before returning to their jobs. If we lose—well, they go right back to work." What do the players do between seasons? Malone sells insurance and recently established a vending-machine business. Edwards probably will go back to his job with a local automobile salesroom, Shugart to an ice cream company, Young and Carroll to cement contracting firms, Masterson to a parking lot firm. All this sounds plenty prosaic from the grandstand's point of view, but a lot easier on the little woman.

POST MORTEM—Reports of the preelection Democratic motorcade in New York continue to come in. One girl who took part in the speaking tour tells how baffled she was by a feminine heckler during a stop in Times Square. The woman would shout some such question as "How about the national debt?" As the speaker opened her mouth to answer, she would give vent to a loud "Boo!", proceed without pause to another question and drown out the next answer the same way. . . . Another speaker would say, "Let's sing!" whenever she felt the crowd was about to razz her. She'd lift her voice in "The Star-Spangled Banner," get her listeners to join her and resume her speech only when she felt they were with her once more.

Betty Furness, starring this week in "Off the Record" at the National, wears a bracelet composed of old watch fobs, seals and lockets. One she treasures was worn by President Grant on his watch chain, another is an antique poison box. But the prize, we think, is a locket containing Robert Taylor's first white hair.

The Christmas rush, with its tired and irritable shoppers, is extra hard on the extra salespeople who are hired to handle the holiday trade and who naturally don't know the stock as well as the old hands. So have a heart, pleads the personnel director of one large department store here. "Remember that your clerk may be new to her department, but that she is anxious to please. If she has difficulty finding things, suggest that one of the older girls help her. Don't confuse her unnecessarily by paying for purchases with checks, and by asking that even microscopic packages be delivered. She has been taught to treat you as though you were a guest in her home; if you do your part toward maintaining the relationship, it will be a merrier Christmas all around."

New Wood Treatment

A new process of wood treatment all but makes magic—it makes soft wood hard; it colors the wood all the way through; it waxes the wood all the way through; it cedarizes the wood; it makes the wood fireproof, alcohol-proof, warp-proof and expansion-proof.

One story of why Santa comes down the chimney has it that the idea started long ago when the custom was to sweep out the chimney at this time of the year. Somehow along the way Santa and the chimney sweep became merged into the one jolly old fellow.

Stature Influenced by Ancestry; Food and Diet Also Factors

By Ida Jean Kain

GROWING UP is a serious business with the 'teens, particularly when there's reason to suspect that one is not growing fast enough and may wind up as "the runt of the family."

If you are under 20, you still have a say-so about your stature. According to the statistics, the most marked periods of growth occur between the ages of 12 to 16, and 16 to 20, so if you have missed out on the first, you may be able to catch up on the second.

We might as well face the fact that ancestors exert a terrific influence on the chances for height. They are listed as a 70 per cent factor in structure. But, nevertheless, you are not keeping up with your generation unless you outstrip parents who were short. Each successive generation is a mite taller than its predecessor—and the most logical explanation is the improvement in diet.

You may have noticed that in this country the girls from one section seem to be taller than those from another. The tallest girls come from the Western States, where they not only inherit tall ancestors, but lead a healthful outdoor life and follow a diet that includes plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables.

A good percentage of the Westerners are of Scandinavian descent—and there again hangs a tale of good nutrition. The old Vikings were good fishermen, and they shipped their catch to other countries, all except the cod livers, which were too perishable to ship. So they ate the livers themselves, and that might have quite a lot to do with their heritage of height. At any rate, don't get the idea you have outgrown your cod liver oil.

And don't be too sure that you are too grown up to play. You would be astonished at the number of Broadway and Hollywood stars who have excelled in sports of some kind before they took prizes for beauty. We have it on excellent medical authority that sports of all kinds, and stretching exercises—particularly those on the horizontal bar or the "jungle gym"—will help you to grow. But if those activities don't do anything else they will give you a lovely figure, and surely there's no objection to being a vest-pocket Venus!

The glandular cases in which growth is permanently retarded unless special treatment is given are, fortunately, the exception. You are probably normal and you can control your diet, sleep and exercise—all of which promote normal height.

Boiled down, here is the recipe that will help you to grow taller in your 'teens and to be beautiful in your twenties: Nine to ten hours' sleep every night; plenty of outdoor exercise—never less than two hours a day; three good nourishing meals at regular hours, the menus including one quart of whole milk daily, 100 per cent whole wheat bread, whole wheat cereal, lots of fresh fruits and vegetables, meat and eggs. These foods supply the protein, minerals and vitamins you need to grow on.

Daughter of Naval Attache to London Completes Plans for Wedding Jan. 4

Marian Kirk Will Be Married Here To Dr. J. W. Appel, 3d, of Scarsdale; Sister Will Be Maid of Honor

By Dudley Harmon

Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alan Kirk, has completed plans for her wedding, January 4, to Dr. John W. Appel 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Appel, jr., of Scarsdale, N. J.

Miss Deborah Kirk, who is at college, is coming home for the holidays and will be maid of honor for her sister. The bridesmaids are the Misses Jane Acheson, Ann Wilkinson, Julia Martin, of New York; Emily Cheney, of Manchester, Conn., and Holly Appel, of Scarsdale, sister of the prospective bridegroom.

William Trafford, of New York, will be best man for Dr. Appel and the ushers include Dudley Brown, of Milwaukee; Dr. Francis Sargent Cheever, Augustus Parker, jr., and John L. Grandin, of Boston; Beekman Pool, of Locust Valley, Long Island; Paul Swett, jr., of Hartford, Conn.; Dr. Alvin Pappenheimer, jr., of Merion, Pa., and Charles R Appel, of Lancaster, Pa.

Mrs. Richard Wilmer is lending Mrs. Kirk her home for the reception, which will be attended only by relatives and close friends of the couple. The ceremony will take place at St. John's Church at 4 o'clock.

Miss Acheson has just returned to Washington with her mother, Mrs. Dean Acheson, after a vacation in Jamaica, where the former went to recuperate from an illness. Miss Wilkinson, who has been since last year in Honolulu with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, is expected back in Washington tomorrow.

The Kirk family is hoping that the head of the house, Capt. Kirk, will return in time for Christmas from London, where he is our Naval Attache. He is due for a vacation, but no definite date has been set for his departure.

Miss Kirk was graduated from the Madeira School and Bryn Mawr College. She made her debut in Washington and was presented at the Court of St. James's last year. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Frederick L. Chapin, of Washington.

Dr. Appel, who is an alumnus of Harvard, is on the staff of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and is practicing at the Institute of Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia.

Miss Taylor To Give Dinner

Another prospective wedding—also of a popular post debutante and a future doctor—will be that of Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor to Frank Goodnow MacMurray. Mr. MacMurray is studying at Harvard Medical School, and the couple have decided to wait until his studies end in June before being married.

Mr. MacMurray, who is the son of the American Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. John Van Antwerp MacMurray, will come to Washington shortly to spend Christmas with his aunt and uncle, Col. and Mrs. Melvin Wright, of Kalorama Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor and their family plan to motor down to Yorktown, Va., where they have an historic old house. Mr. MacMurray will join his fiancee there for a brief time. The Taylors' oldest daughter, Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, will be home from Bennington College for part of the vacation, and for the remainder will join a skiing party at St. Sauveur.

Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor will give a dinner January 2 at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of four of the season's debutantes. They are the Misses Louise Stillwell, Elysabeth Barbour, Georgiana Flather and Jessie Kauffmann.

Mrs. Ansell Fetes Bride-to-Be

Another prospective bride, Miss Mary Sleman, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Samuel Ansell, jr. Mrs. Ansell entertained at her home in Bethesda and wore a blue and gold wool tea gown. The guest of honor was in black with a rhinestone necklace.

Miss Sleman will be married December 21 to H. Duncan Clark, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Clark, of Chevy Chase, Md. Miss Sleman, who is the daughter of Mrs. Paul Sleman, is a graduate of Goucher College.

Among the tea guests yesterday were Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, mother of the hostess; Mrs. Merton English, Mrs. George Belic, Mrs. Austin Sullivan, Mrs. I. B. Kirkland, Mrs. Karl Michelet, Mrs. Edward Pickford, Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. John Stafford, Mrs. Marshall Nickols and Mrs. Samuel Bogeley, who is a sister of Mr. Clark.

Party Opens 17th Season Of Friday Club

Mr. and Mrs. McClure, Charlotte Clark Hosts At Preceding Fetes

Inaugurating its seventeenth season since members first used to gather on Friday evenings at the home of the late Mrs. Thomas Walsh, the Friday Dancing Club got off to another winter's start last night with a party at the Willard.

Prominent members of residential and official society belong to this gathering, which Mrs Walsh inaugurated at her famous mansion, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue. They meet from time to time throughout the year for dancing, and this season the club has organized Dutch Treat dinners before the parties.

Mrs. Parker West At McClure Dinner

Mrs. Parker West, committee chairman, was among the guests at the large dinner given by Mr and Mrs. John McClure last evening. The affair was held at the Willard, the guests being seated at a large horseshoe table decorated with baskets of small chrysanthemums in shades of yellow and bronze. Mrs. West chose for the occasion a gown of black velvet with a square neck and puffed sleeves made entirely of black and white sequins. She also wore a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. McClure's frock had a long bodice effect beaded in silver and gold sequins and a billowing skirt fashioned of several layers of tulle. A corsage of orchids completed her costume.

Ranking guests at the McClure dinner included the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Senator Arthur Capper, Admiral and Mrs. Charles Riggs, Mrs. Benton McMillin, and Judge and Mrs. Samuel Whitaker.

Miss Clark Is Hostess

Miss Charlotte Clark was hostess at cocktails and supper before the party, and several Dutch treat dinners took place also. Much missed at the gathering were Ralph Brewster, recently elected Senator from Maine, and Mrs. Brewster. The latter, who is a member of the committee, writes friends here that she and her husband are vacationing in Honolulu, but hope to return to the Capital December 18.

Other committee members are Senora de Recinos, Mrs. Daniel Reed, Mrs. McMillin, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Riggs and Mrs. William S. Culbertson.

The large ballroom of the Willard had been decorated last evening with masses of chrysanthemums in various shades. Among the many who danced until the small hours of the morning were Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Hurja, Mrs. Wilton Lambert, Judge and Mrs. Ernest van Fossan and Mrs. Arthur MacArthur.

Cocktail Party At Mrs. Phillips'

Gathering in a group of young people, Mrs. Clifton Phillips entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon between the hours of 5 and 7.

The party was given in the home of her aunt, Mrs. Sydney Cloman. Mrs. Cloman is planning to leave later in the season for California.

Has Visitor For Week-End

who has as house guest for the week-end Miss Nancy Townsend, of New York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Townsend. Miss Townsend, who arrived in town yesterday, will be informally entertained by her host and hostess before returning to her home tomorrow evening. Mrs. Blair just returned to town this week from New Canaan, Conn., where she and Mr. Blair had spent the Thanksgiving holidays as guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Blair. Mr. Blair returned to town directly after the holidays, but Mrs. Blair stayed for a prolonged visit

CAPITAL WHIRL

by Sally Swift

VERY POPULAR "good neighbor" visitors to Latin America at the moment are the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony Biddle, who are lingering on past their schedule in Havana to enjoy Cuban sunshine and Cuban hospitality. The Biddles are accompanied by Mrs. Biddle's son-in-law and daughter, Prince and Princess Alexander Hohenlohe. Alex Hohenlohe was a schoolmate at the famous Rosey School in Switzerland of Jose de Lasa, Attache at the Cuban Embassy in Washington

Once you are the friend of a Cuban, his whole family counts itself friends of your whole family. So the Biddles and Hohenlohes have been wined and dined by the entire Lasa family in all its branches and ramifications. Cosme de la Torriente, former Cuban Secretary of State and one-time Ambassador to Washington, and Senora de la Torriente, uncle and aunt of Senor de Lasa, gave a dinner in honor of the visitors at the lovely old de la Torriente house by the sea whence one enjoys a superb view of the Morro Castle, and another party for them on their farm in the country.

A Lasa brother entertained the Biddles and Hohenlohes at the Havana Yacht Club and took them on a deep sea fishing expedition, and a Lasa cousin was their host at his sugar plantation in the interior of the country. Also their host was the United States Ambassador to Cuba who, with Mrs. Messersmith, gave a dinner for his colleague at the embassy. It is small wonder that the travelers are in no hurry to return to these chilly United States.

WASHINGTON itself, however, has many pleasant things to offer, though at present warm breezes are not among them. Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn have sent out invitations for a dance in honor of their debutante daughter, Cynthia Louisa Dunn, to take place at the Sulgrave Club on Thursday, December 19. There is a quality of charm about the Dunns' parties that makes them memorable in the past and anticipated in the future. No one who was there has forgotten elder daughter Marianna's debut at the 1925 F Street Club, when everyone danced lightly till dawn, weather was perfect for the garden, and a dignified young light of the State Department, who had looked askance all night at milk on the buffet table, emerged from the club at 6 o'clock and quaffed a beaker of it with a friendly milkman in the middle of the street.

ANOTHER PARTY to look forward to is Mrs. Sumner Welles' "at home" on New Year's Day. The invitations read, "Oxon Hill Manor," which means a glimpse of the country that should be very refreshing after New Year's Eve celebrations.

For the youngsters of boarding-school age, who cheerfully rule their parents' hearts and lives at Christmas, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith will give a small dance at Grassland Club on Saturday, December 28. The party is in honor of Mrs Smith's daughter, Virginia Summerlin, and Virginia's British house guest, Ursula Buckley.

Commander and Mrs. William A. Heard will usher in the holidays with a dinner and dance for pretty Anne Heard at the 1925 F Street Club on Thursday, December 19.

Miss Minnie Hawke has chosen a later date for her dance for the young, one of Washington's holiday institutions, and has sent out invitations for Monday December 30 at the Sulgrave Club.

MR. AND MRS. Turner Catledge asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon to meet Hollywood's Helen Vinson, and Mrs. Douglas Churchill. The two attractive ladies had motored all the way across the continent in Miss Vinson's station wagon and had thoroughly enjoyed the trek.

Among those gathered to greet Mrs. Churchill and Miss Vinson were Mrs. Mansfield Gregg, just beginning to get about after an accident to her knee which had "grounded" her for weeks; Speaker Sam Rayburn, escorting the erstwhile invalid; Commander and Mrs. Frederick Kauffman, Mrs. John Parker, Cecilia Tom Rath, Bill McEvoy and Aldace Walker.

Mrs. Wilson Goes To Meet Daughter

Mrs. William Pegram Wilson left yesterday for New York, where she will meet her daughter, Mrs. Rene E. J. Grosfils, who is returning with her small son from Yokohama.

Mrs. Wilson's son, Lieut. Robert Pratt Wilson, U. S. Ordnance Reserve, and his bride are now at 1501 North Rolfe Street Arlington, Va. Mrs. Wilson was the former Susan Jeannett Fisher, of Brockton, Mass. They were married in that city on October 5.

Starks Give Season's Last Reception

Giant Poinsettias Decorate House On Observatory Hill

By Elizabeth Hennecy

Giant poinsettias flung their flaming reds and brilliant greens across the rooms in a pre-Christmas welcome as the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Harold R. Stark, and Mrs. Stark greeted their guests at the last of their official receptions of the season yesterday afternoon.

Receiving in the drawing room of the admiral's house on Observatory Hill were Admiral and Mrs. Stark and the Commandant of the Navy Yard, Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, and Mrs. Pettengill. Mrs. Stark was gowned in a floor-length model of royal blue chiffon, the bodice trimmed in silver bugling, and wore a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Pettengill wore a tea gown of navy crepe with a bodice of turquoise blue sprinkled with brilliants.

Also scheduled to be in the receiving line were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, but the Secretary was called out of town on an inspection trip Mrs. Knox did, however, drop in for a bit in the middle of the afternoon. Looking trim and chic in her dark frock accented with a gardenia pinned at the shoulder, her hat brightened with a touch of red, she circulated quietly among the guests for some time and then unobtrusively vanished.

Very much the center of attention in the main hall was a large and lustrous plant of amazon lilies, with two stalks of star-shaped white blossoms drooping toward the deep green foliage. A product of the admiral's own conservatory, it had been brough in proudly that morning by the gardener, who had for the first time coaxed two stalks to bloom on the same plant—and luckily just in time for the party.

Generally in charge throughout the afternoon were the wives of Admiral Stark's aides, Mrs. Charles Wellborn, jr., and Mrs. William R. Smedberg 3d; the former chic in a black crepe frock accented with a quadruple strand of pearls, and trimmed with white kitten's ear angora pockets; Mrs. Smedberg in a smart black frock, which formed a perfect background for silver strand necklace and bracelets of hammered silver.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Mrs. James B. Glennon, jr., Mrs. William R. Furlong, Mrs. Charles M. Oman, Mrs. Albert Knox, Mrs. E. H. Cope, Mrs. Ben Morrell and Mrs. Robert E. Hoyt. At the punch bowl were Mrs. Frederick Withington, Mrs. Albert Murdaugh, Mrs. John Taylor and Mrs. Harold D. Krick.

Noted during the afternoon were the Commandant of the Coast Guard, Rear Admiral Russell Waesche, and Mrs. Waesche; Admiral C. S. Freeman, who is commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District at Bremerton, Wash., and is in the Capital for the Selection Board; Capt. and Mrs. H. B. Riele, Capt. and Mrs. Glenn Davis, Capt. and Mrs. Mervyn S. Bennion and many more.

Mrs. Murrell, Feminist Here for Convention, Discusses Status of Her Sex in Florida Law

Down There a Wife Cannot Make A Contract or Manage Own Property, It Is Explained; Hopes Seen for Change

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Staff Writer

The Florida woman is about to get out from under "the wing or cover of her lord and master" with the redrafting of the married women's laws of that State, according to Ethel Ernest Murrell, chairman of the redrafting committee, who is here for the biennial convention of the National Woman's Party.

Mrs. Murrell, one of a large group of ardent feminists who arrived in Washington yesterday for the conclave, stopped in Deland, Fla., en route, to present the redrafting committee's report at the meeting of the Florida State Bar Association. She will be one of the speakers at the convention banquet tonight at the Mayflower Hotel, on the program with Pearl Buck. She also was among those who attended the reception last night at Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party, where a portrait of Maude Younger, a founder of the party, was unveiled.

The redrafting committee, headed by Mrs. Murrell, proposes to abolish the "disabilities of coverture" freeing the women of Florida from the provisions of a law based on an old English statute, she says. This was defined by Blackstone, says Mrs. Murrell, as keeping the women "under the wing or cover of her lord and master" and Florida women don't like it. She has been campaigning against the "disabilities" through the press, on the lecture platform and over the air and became interested in equal rights through the support members of the National Woman's Party gave her in this effort.

Married Women Are Not Allowed The Right to Make a Contract

One of the "disabilities" is the provision that a married woman may not contract or be contracted with. If she signs a lease she can break it promptly because she has not legal right to make the contract, says Mrs. Murrell.

Another "disability," amazing even to the voteless women of the District, is the provision that a woman may not manage or control her own property. Although it may all have been hers at the time of her marriage, her husband may collect the rents and profits and she has no right even to go into court and ask what disposition he makes of the money, Mrs. Murrell explains.

Neither may a woman in Florida sign a promissory note, nor sue nor be sued without her husband's joinder. If she wants to go into business she must go into court, says Mrs. Murrell, prove she is competent and then pay a license of $150 or more "buying herself free to conduct business for herself as a man or a single woman would do."

Born in Laramie, Wyo., Mrs. Murrell attended Chevy Chase School and King-Smith here. Later she attended the Sorbonne in Paris, the University of Wyoming and in 1934 received her L.L.B. from the University of Miami, being admitted to the State and Federal Bars in Florida the same year.

Three years later she published "Law for Ladies," a book clarifying the Florida law which has been adopted as a textbook by the Florida State College for Women. She is also the author of "Practical Law," used as a text in various high schools and junior colleges throughout the country.

National Women's Party at Home To Delegates and Their Friends

The National Woman's Party was at home last evening in the Alva Belmont House to friends and members and delegates to the biennial convention which meets this morning in the Pan-American Room in the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the party, will preside.

The feature of the evening was the unveiling of the portrait of the late Maude Younger, one of the founders of the Woman's Party and one of the most earnest workers for the Equal Rights Amendment.

Mrs. Inez Haynes, of New York, spoke of Miss Younger's contribution to the cause, stressing her determination and perseverance. Mrs. Wiley presided at the meeting and brief speeches were made by Mrs. Bernita Matthews and Miss Laura Berrien, active members of the District of Columbia branch.

The portrait has been hung in the drawing room of Alva Belmont House. The painting was made by Alice K. Reischer, who came to America from Vienna in November, 1938.

Assisting at the unveiling was little Leila Enders, daughter of Mrs. Leila Enders, District of Columbia chairman.

Among those attending the reception were Mrs. Lois Buenzli, of Philadelphia; Edwina Austin Avery, convention chairman; Mrs. Amy C. Ransome, of California; Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, of the District of Columbia; Miss Josephine Casey, of New York; Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Delaware; Mrs. Avery Coonley, Miss Alma Lutz, Miss Marguerite Smith, of Boston; Mrs. Jane Norman Smith, first vice chairman from New York; Mrs. Nina E. Allender, Mrs. Lorraine Blair, new Chicago chairman; Mrs. Serena Davis, of Philadelphia; Anita Pollitzer, of South Carolina, and Clara Snell Wolfe, of Ohio.

A group of women from Chicago also present included Mrs. Lorraine Blair, chairman of the Illinois State Branch, a noted author, lecturer on finance and founder of the Woman's Finance Forum of America; Dr. Anna Ranes, one of the founders of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Marie Brown, founder of the Grandmothers' Club of America; Mrs. A. K. Anderson, a leading industrialist; Mrs. Clare Kelley, vice-president of the Illinois Branch; Miss Matilda Fenberg, an attorney credited with having put through the woman's jury bill in Illinois.

Among others were Miss Saidie Canarie, of New York; Mrs. W. O. Hays of Orange, Va.; Mrs. Edith Bartlett Conway, state chairman of the Massachusetts Branch; Miss Marguerite Smith, trustee and librarian of the Zion Research Library in Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter, of Greenfield, Mass., former president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Louise Earl, of Lynn, president of the Radcliffe Phi Beta Kappa society.

Miss Lois Pugh, of Boise, Idaho; Miss Janet Edwards, of Minnesota; Mrs. Helen Costello, from Portsmouth, Rhode Island; Mrs. Dorothy Herron, from Lake Placid, New York, and Mrs. Joseph Carmody, of Portsmouth, Rhode Island.

Mrs. Ethel Ernest Murrell, of Florida, who contributes more than glamour to the biennial convention of the National Woman's Party, opening today at the Mayflower Hotel—she is chairman of the committee which has just completed the redrafting of the married women's laws of Florida, and is widely known as a lawyer and author

Hurban Warns of World Peril From German Supernationalism

Envoy From Czecho-Slovakia Tells A. A. U. W. Decency Is Common Denominator That Will Serve as Foundation for Universal Peace

Decency is the common denominator that can serve for all peoples, irrespective of race and creed, as a solid foundation for universal peace and well-being, Col. Vladimir S. Hurban, Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, declared last night in an address before the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Speaking at a dinner sponsored by the International Outlook Section of the branch, of which Mrs. James W. Irwin is chairman, Col. Hurban asserted that pacts and treaties were worthless paper unless the nations build on a foundation of common decency in national and international affairs.

The misery of Germany after the World War was not caused by the severe clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, which were never applied, he said. It was due to the fact that Germany should not be the dominating power. The failure of the League of Nations was not the fault of the League Covenant, he asserted, but of the nations which were unwilling to relinquish their absolute freedom of action in realizing their lust for power over others.

Discussing the Munich crisis and the fate of his own country, Col. Hurban said: "In 1938 the comparatively young but healthy and promising small democratic republic became the subject of a test. The whole world was being threatened by a rapidly spreading disease. This disease was the aggressive supernationalism of the totalitarian states based upon the theory of an absolute superiority of one race over all others. The doctors who recognized the danger of this disease did not study its nature, otherwise they would not have prescribed a medicine which, they thought, would check the spread of the disease. This medicine was called 'appeasement.'

"Czecho-Slovakia, despite our protests, was chosen to be the subject of the test of its reaction upon the aggressor. The results were diametrically opposed to expectations. Czecho-Slovakia was occupied by Germany—I am confident only temporarily—and the disease, instead of being checked, began to spread more vigorously with devastating results," he said.

"The German policy in the occupied countries is based upon a thorough, scientific system of annihilation of the peoples of non-German nationality," Col. Hurban continued.

Southeast To Have New Bus Service

Commission Orders An Additional Line And Extension of Transfer System

Improvement of bus service for residents of Southeast Washington was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission, in establishing a new bus line and providing for an interline transfer system between the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines.

The new bus line will serve residents of the Skyland Apartments development at Twenty-fifth Street and Good Hope Road Southeast, and will be designated the "C-2" bus line. Three other bus lines were extended, in this neighborhood, for the convenience of Hillcrest residents.

Creation of the interline transfer system followed three public hearings at which residents complained of the inadequate service rendered by the suburban and local transit lines and of having to pay a double fare to reach certain points in the city.

Both the transfer arrangement and the bus service will begin on January 1.

Under the new arrangement each company is directed by the commission to issue transfers to the other on payment of a 10-cent fare. The suburban company will continue to maintain its run into the city to a terminal at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Need for the extended service came about when the Washington residents who relied on the suburban line for transportation complained of paying another fare to board the Capital Transit Company cars. It was pointed out at the hearings there were "a number" of persons living in the city where the local transit company provided no service.

These persons could board the suburban line for 10 cents and ride to the terminal at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, but if they wanted transportation to another point in the city they would have to pay another fare. The new arrangement provides three transfer points where these residents may board a local bus or street car without paying an additional fare. These terminals are at Barney Circle; Pennsylvania and Minnesota Avenues and Pennsylvania and Branch Avenues southeast. The rider electing to remain on the bus, with express service to the terminal, will not be issued a free transfer, under the commission order.

The new "C-2" line will follow the following route: From terminal at Commodore Barney Circle, east on Pennsylvania Avenue to Twenty-fifth Street, south on Twenty-fifth Street, Naylor Road and Good Hope Road to Alabama Avenue, then east to Thirty-first Place, then north to W Street, east on W Street to Thirty-second Street, south on Thirty-second Street to terminal at Thirty-second Street and Alabama Avenue. Returning the bus will go west on Alabama Avenue to Good Hope Road, north on Good Hope Road, Naylor Road and Twenty-fifth Street to Pennsylvania Avenue and west to the terminal.

Three new terminals were ordered for the "C-4"; "C-6" and "C-8" routes, these being respectively: On the north side of U Street Southeast, beginning 46 feet east of the east curb line of Nichols Avenue; on the east side of Thirty-third Street Southeast, beginning 90 feet north of the north curb line extended of Gainesville Street; on the west side of Kenilworth Avenue, north of Deane Avenue.

Inquest Today Into Death of Virginia Girl

Two persons died yesterday of traffic crash injuries in the District ared, while a coroner's jury prepared to investigate the death of a 6-year-old Arlington, Va., girl to determine if she is a District traffic victim.

Albert Bolling, 42, of 1317 Irving Street Northwest, a taxi driver, died at Georgetown Hospital of injuries received when his automobile plunged down an embankment on River Road, Bethesda, Md., November 29.

At Alexandria Hospital the fourth victim of a Fairfax County, Va., truck crash October 26, died yesterday. He was James Beavers, 3, son of Frank Beavers and Mrs. Lena Beavers, who was killed in the same accident.

Two other members of the family, Marjorie, 6, and Vivian, 8, died a few hours after a light truck, driven by their father, collided with a trailer-truck on the Richmond Highway near Mount Vernon. Beavers and another child were seriously injured.

An investigation into the death of Betty Walker, 6, of Arlington, who tumbled from a moving taxicab Monday, was ordered yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, after a conference with Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the accident investigation unit. The child died Wednesday at Providence Hospital.

The accident occurred at Fourth Street and Madison Drive Northeast. Walter R. Gillespie, 31, of 1301 Fourth Street Southwest, driver of the cab, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. C. Walker, Betty's parents, who were passengers in the vehicle, will appear at the inquest today.

Capital News in Brief

Oh Dear, Hunter's Deer Really Got Away

Warm clothing and—venison, no less—was the loot of the thief who broke into a parked automobile at Sixteenth and East Capitol Streets early yesterday.

The car belonged to Policeman Joseph S. Davis, Sixth Precinct, who said a half of deer was taken along with a blue overcoat, a sweater and a pair of gloves. Davis shot the deer while hunting in Pennsylvania this week and for lack of a better place to store it, had left it in his car overnight.

It's Not the Theft, It's the Damage

Charles R. Lewis, attendant at a service station at Third and K Streets Northwest, didn't so much mind the $3 that two holdup men robbed him of last night.

But they smashed his cash register doing it.

Lewis told police the two men came in asking for change for a $1 bill. One of them distracted Lewis' attention, while the other threw the cash register on the floor to break it open. Clutching three $1 bills the robbers fled.

Randle Association Urges Drive on License 'Slackers'

The Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night urged the Eleventh Precinct policemen to make a drive on out-of-town license plates on cars in that community. "A large number of new residents seem reluctant to get their District licenses," it was reported.

The Association's bridge committee reported the new John Philip Sousa bridge across the Anacostia branch will be ready for traffic by New Year's Day.

The Public Utility Commission will be asked to adjust taxicab rates affecting the Randle Highlands area. Members complained that they are blocked in the fourth zone although the distance from downtown Washington is less than that of the fourth zone in other sections of the city.

Improved Housing, Clean Block Drive Also on Program

This is the sixty-ninth article in a series about associations of citizens in the District of Columbia.

An extensive civic program for the 1940-41 season was announced this week by the 12-year-old East Central Civic Association, headed by Miss Corinne E. Martin.

MISS MARTIN

The program will be backed by nearly 300 association members, Miss Martin said yesterday. It includes drives for:

"Adequate medical care for District residents;

"Complete political enfranchisement for Washington;

"Solution of housing problems and elimination of slums;

"A new armory setup for the District National Guard;

"A new recreational center in the association's area;

"Participation by District residents in the National Defense Program;

"Convalescent Home projects;

"Better facilities for girls and boys in the various club activities; and

"The annual clean block campaign."

Past accomplishments claimed by the association include the reduction of streetcar fares for school children, the prohibition of liquor stores near schools and churches, and protests against admitting children to showings of gangster films and the sale of toy pistols and knives to children.

A Junior League was formed last year as an auxiliary to the East Central Civic Association, and this year is developing a civic and social program of its own for the youth of the area, Miss Martin said.

Both bodies serve the area bounded on the north by Florida Avenue Northwest, on the south by K Street Northwest, on the east by Second Street Northeast, and on the west by Seventh Street Northwest.

L. Gordon Leech last night was selected by the directors of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs to head their campaign for funds this year, Morris Cafritz, president, announced. This will be Leech's fourth term as campaign director. The board met at the Ambassador Hotel.

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., who was named to work with Leech, said the campaign would be conducted from headquarters in the Transportation Building, 1631 H Street Northwest, from February 15 to March 11. It was understood the quota this year would be higher than the $100,000 subscribed last year. A committee to work with Leech and Dulcan will be appointed next week.

Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger, director of the Police Boys Clubs, reported on a recent inspection of similar clubs in Philadelphia, Bridgeport, Conn., and New York City. He said recommendations touching upon conduct of the clubs here would be made after trips to other Eastern clubs.

Dr. Charles B. Bassaches, head of the Police Boys Clubs dental clinic, asked the board for 1,000 toothbrushes. These, he said, would be used in instructing the 14,000 young members in care of their teeth.

Folk School Troupe Depicts America's Struggles in Song

Archibald MacLeish Takes Part in Program; Mountain Ballads, Melodies Of Deep South Presented at Pierce Hall

America's folklore, her struggles and her hopes came to life in song last night before an audience of more than 200 at Pierce Hall in a program of Americana presented by the Highlander Folk School of Monteagle, Tenn.

Archibald MacLeish, speaking not as the Librarian of Congress but as one of this country's great poets, read his symphony of words, "America Was Promises."

Early explorers of America, the epic portrayed, saw the continent as a land of promises—promises that would come true of themselves. Thomas Jefferson saw it as a promise to the common man. John Adams as a promise to the well-to-do and industrial developers, and Thomas Payne as a promise to all men.

Today, the poem continued, the answer is in Poland, in Spain, in Czechoslovakia—promises come true only if the people make them come true.

A ballad poem, "And They Lynched Him to a Tree," written by Mrs. Francis Biddle with music by William Grant Still, was sung by the Washington Choral Society and the Howard University Glee Club.

Mountain ballads as sung in the oldtime Tennessee hills were presented by Mrs. Myles Horton, wife of the founder of the folk school.

Houdie Leadbeatter, colored songster from Louisiana, sang Negro and folk melodies of the deep South.

Sponsors of the program included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Leon Henderson, member of the Defense Commission, and others.

Soldiers Sought For Kidnaping, Robbing Woman

Police and Army officials last night were searching for two privates attached to Bolling Field for investigation into the kidnaping and robbery of a 34-year-old colored woman yesterday.

The victim, Susie Cade, of 1254 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, told police she was accosted by the men at Nichols Avenue and Lebaum Street Southeast, about 7:30 a. m. One of the men held a gun, she stated, and forced her into the car.

They drove to Nichols Avenue and Hadley Road, the woman said, and there her pocketbook containing $2.55 was taken and she was thrown from the moving car. She suffered cuts and bruises.

Police later obtained an identification of her assailants and said both were absent without leave from the Army airfield.

Manufacturers Group Names C. E. Riddell

The Manufacturers Representatives Association, a new District organization formed to cooperate with defense activities, last night chose C. E. Riddell, as executive secretary-treasurer. Thirty-five members attended the meeting at 300 B Street Southeast.

Riddell said the association would offer its services to all Government agencies, including the National Defense Commission, and hoped to act as a "clearing house for information" on manufacturers' representatives in Washington.

Ease Hatch Act Penalty, Mitchell Asks

Municipal Law Officers Are Told Removal Is Too Harsh In Minor Offenses

Civil Service Commission President Harry B. Mitchell yesterday advocated an amendment to the Hatch Act relaxing the penalty on violators.

Mitchell, addressing the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, said the law allowed the commission but one course toward violators—removal—and this he regarded as a mistake in instances of minor infraction. He said the commission now is investigating 51 alleged violations of the act.

"You have a law that is very difficult to enforce," he stated. He said he would like for the institute or any other such body to do what it could to have the law amended "so that such drastic penalties won't have to be imposed."

His views were expressed after a formal speech and in answer to questions by delegates.

In the formal speech, Mitchell said: "We hope to develop an enforcement program combining informational and educational features with prosecutions where appropriate jurisdiction and statutory violations are established.

"Rigid Prosecution"

"Our general policy will be to carry out the intention of Congress fully and impartially, by rigid prosecution where necessary, but at all times with due regard for civil rights and, of course, due process as guaranteed by the Constitution."

Edward H. Foley, jr., general counsel of the Treasury, told the institute that costs of the national defense program made it necessary to obtain more revenue by removing tax exemptions from future issues of Federal, State and local governmental securities.

A committee of the Federal-State law enforcement conference drafted "model" State laws covering sabotage prevention, control of explosives, State home guard mobilization and protection of public properties. The Justice Department announced the proposals will be sent to officials in each of the 43 States in which legislatures convene in January.

The institute, meeting in the Mayflower, yesterday elected William C. Chanler, corporation counsel of New York City, president. Other officers are:

Walter J. Mattison, city attorney, Milwaukee, first vice president; Ray L. Chesebro, city attorney, Los Angeles, second vice president; Philip H. Hill, city solicitor, Charleston, W. Va., treasurer, and the following trustees: David Diamond, corporation counsel, Buffalo, N. Y.; Horace Edwards, city attorney, Richmond; Walter E. Helmke, city attorney, Fort Wayne, Ind.; L. E. Latourette, city attorney, Portland, Oreg., and Joe W. Anderson, city attorney, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Change Urged in D. C. Tax

Glenn Simmon, assistant corporation counsel, spoke at an earlier session. Change in the District's income-tax law by which reciprocal credits are allowed to both residents and nonresidents for income taxes paid to any State is needed to make the law workable and fair, Simmon said.

The institute will hold a breakfast session at 8:30 a. m. today and "The Work of the Council of National Defense as it Affects Cities" will be discussed by Daniel W. Hoan, former mayor of Milwaukee. The regular session starts at 9:30

Episcopal Youth Hears Leaders In D. C. Today

Religious and Government leaders will address a youth conference here today under the auspices of the Washington-Baltimore branch of the Clerical Union of the Episcopal Church.

The Rev. William S. Chalmers, member of the Order of the Holy Cross and acting headmaster of the Kent School for Boys at Kent, Conn., will address the opening sessions at 11 a. m. at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church, Forty-sixth and Q Streets Northwest, on "Human Nature and Why." Following luncheon there, the Rev. M. [illegible] Bowley, Ph. D., of St. David's [illegible], Baltimore, will speak on "W[illegible]an Nature Needs."

A pilgrimage to the W[illegible]ton Cathedral at the invitation of the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, [illegible]an, will follow, with Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell, of Providence, R. I., preaching in Bethlehem Chapel on "What God Has Done to Meet the Needs of Human Beings."

Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, will address the concluding supper meeting in St. Alban's parish hall at 6 p. m. It will be preceded by a program of recreation. Delegates are expected from Baltimore, Richmond, Wilmington, Philadelphia and the Capital. The Rev. Albert J. Dubois, St. Agnes' rector, is handling arrangements.

That Subscription Season Is Not Dead, Only Dozing

Books Still Open for Four Plays at National; That 'Wooden Soldier' Is Man of Dynamite; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE DEFENDERS OF THE FAITH who have been worrying about what may have happened to the subscription season of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society at the National, may put their minds at rest. Nothing has. That is to say, nothing of consequence.

BELL

To be sure, there will be no subscription play on E Street this month, but in January it probably will be another story. The prospect at the moment is that Miriam Hopkins will be along next month under the Guild-A. T. S. aegis in Tennessee Williams' "Battle of the Angels," which has just gone into rehearsal under the direction of Margaret Webster. Or it may be the new Philip Barry play, "Liberty Jones," his first since "The Philadelphia Story." There is talk, too, that Raymond Massey is a possibility.

Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington manager of the subscription season, also drops the hint that by February the Chicago run of William Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon, may be over and at overlong last we will cash in on the early-season promise. Then there is "Twelfth Night," costarring Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, coming along as soon as the New York engagement is concluded—which likewise may be in February. And there is always the possibility that when the going gets good after the turn of the year a "bonus" play or two may be added to the original six as a reward of patience.

Despite the fact that the Theater Guild-American Theater Society books bear the names of the largest enrollment of subscribers in history, it is made known that subscriptions for the remaining four plays on the regular schedule still may be bought by delinquents who muffed their first chance—as Christmas presents, maybe?

That fellow knew something when he jotted it down that all things come to him who will but wait—or words to that effect. You can ask Claire Trevor. Almost exactly a year ago, Miss Trevor was a one-day visitor in the Capital—and a brutally stormy day it was, too—en route somewhere or other from the Pittsburgh screen premiere of "Allegheny Uprising." Cornered in the National Theater that night between acts, Miss Trevor confided that sometime she hoped to visit Washington long enough to see something more than could be made out through a taxicab window and a driving fall of sleet. Her wish ought to come true next week, when she comes back to town in the principal feminine role in "Out West It's Different," Max Gordon's first production of the season, opening in the National on Monday night.

Announcement has been made by W. F. Rodgers, sales manager of Loew's, Inc., distributors of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, of the elevation of Rudolph Berger, M-G-M manager in Washington since 1925, to the post of district sales manager of the Washington-Charlotte territory, embracing the District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the Carolinas. This is right up Rudy's alley, as the saying goes, since he came to the Capital from the Charlotte office, where he started with M-G-M when the company was formed in 1924. Chairman of the Variety Club's welfare committee and known to everyone in the motion picture industry and practically everyone without, Rudy is a top-drawer selection for the new responsibilities. While he will continue to make his headquarters at 1009 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, he will be succeeded as Washington manager by John Allen, shuttled here from Cincinnati. Congratulations all around.

That sagacious showwoman and gracious lady boniface, Mrs. Helen Hamilton, is to be congratulated upon the engagement of Emile Boreo, at the Troika—if Mary Harris will pardon my stepping across the room to one of her ringside tables. Creator of "The March of the Wooden Soldiers" in the original "Chauve Souris," Boreo is one of those super-dynamic personalities that have to be seen to be believed. With only a showcase full of hats for costumes and props, he is a complete one-man revue. He should be gratified to know that on this visit he will not be "assisted" by the over-stimulated exhibitioniste who barged out from a nearby table to "bolster" his act the last time he was here on another floor. Steps were taken.

The song is ended, but the melody lingers on—or something. What I mean is that while we haven't seen or heard much of Eddie Duchin hereabouts for a tidy spell now—he's playing in the Empire Room at New York's Waldorf-Astoria—the fifth anniversary of the organization of the Eddie Duchin Fan Club brings out the interesting fact that there are now 400-odd members in the national chain of clubs, with the Capital's 30 forming an individual chapter, under the presidency of Marguerite "Babe" Parker, formerly associated with the Metropolitan Theater. "Babe," who also is Southern representative of the national body, is boasting that the local club now has its own rings, pins and sweaters to celebrate Mr. Duchin's proficiency at the keyboard. The pin all the Duchinettes are wearing is a miniature gold piano with his name on it. Palpitating young ladies all aquiver to participate in the semi-monthly meetings should call Randolph-1876.

Social Life In Hollywood GrowsComplex

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Dec. 6.—Love affairs of the movie cuties seem to be getting so mixed up these days that even the keyhole snoopers are seeing double.

The gossip columnists hardly get into print a yarn about Vic Mature being the boy friend of Lana Turner before he's going places in New York with Betty Grable.

So what happens? Miss Grable returns to Hollywood. Edgar Bergen gives a costume ball. Miss Grable attends in a harem costume, on the arm of a young man in black face. And who's the young man?

It's Jackie Coogan, the million-dollar kid, divorced by Miss Grable a year ago because, she said, he was cruel.

That leaves us with Miss Turner, who divorced Artie Shaw. She's dividing her time between Tony Martin, who was divorced by Alice Faye, and Franchot Tone, who was left by Joan Crawford. And so on.

Another little item, which belongs either in the society section or the crime news, concerns Mr. Bugsie Siegel, the New York racketeer under indictment here for murder. While he was supposed to have been in the Los Angeles jail awaiting trial, he was in Beverly Hills the other day, having lunch with Miss Wendy Barrie.

She didn't know he was a murder suspect. She was sitting there in a restaurant, eating her soup, when a deputy sheriff whom she'd met once, came over and asked her to join him and his friend. The friend was Bugsie.

It seemed that Bugsie had been to visit his dentist, with the best wishes of his old friend, the jail physician, Dr. Benjamin Blank. It seems that Bugsie had been in jail 49 days—and had spent 19 of them getting his teeth repaired. So Dr. Blank was suspended, Bugsie was placed behind bars of steel—instead of rubber.

That leads inevitably to the case of the Countess Dorothy DiFrasso. Remember her? She is the well-heeled noblewoman who used to be Hollywood's most spectacular party thrower.

Her last one was aboard the schooner Metha Nelson in January, 1939, when she and a company of Hollywood notables sailed to the Cocos Islands in search of pirate gold. Marino Bello, stepfather of the late Jean Harlow, was one member of the company. Dr. Blank the jail doc was another.

And our old friend, Bugsie, was a third.

Nobody found any gold, only trouble, and then a New York gangster yclept "Big Greenie" was murdered in Hollywood and Bugsie was charged with participating in same. The cops found him in his Bel Aire mansion, hiding in a closet.

New York, Dec. 6.

FOR ALMOST 20 years, ever since he came to Broadway with a challenge and a million and a pair of dice, Nick the Greek has insisted upon being referred to as Nicholas Dandelos. He never has minded the countless stories told about his gambling ventures, of his heavy losses—even up to the $300,000 he lost one Christmas Day, when Lou Holtz, the principal winner, pocketed the fortune and said: "I never knew Santa Claus was a Greek." Nick minded only being called Nick the Greek . . . Once, in Hot Springs, his arm was infected and the doctors insisted upon amputating it. "No," Nick told them. "Bad enough they call me 'Nick the Greek,' instead of 'One-Arm Nick.'" . . . But last week, sitting in the Brown Derby in Hollywood, Nick read the front-page dispatches about the Italian defeats. A page-boy called him to a phone, and addressed him: "Mr. Dandelos?" . . . "No, no," said Nick, fondling the headline. "I'm Nick the Greek."

H. G. WELLS' companion at Sardi's Wednesday night was Constantin Oumansky, the Russian Ambassador to this country . . . Ralph Barnes, the Herald Tribune correspondent who was killed when the R.A.F. bomber in which he was flying crashed in Yugoslavia, will be buried there until the war is over. The British officials are supplying the slab which marks the graves of all the soldier dead, and Barnes' editors forwarded the cost to Britain—$25.

BOB SCOTT, son of Mabel Boll, served a summons for $100,000 damages against the proprietors of the Club Cuba, because of the washroom brawl in which his face was cut and seven stitches taken.

BECAUSE OF GERMANY'S new tactics in concentrating their bombing on different cities in England each day, the editors of Herald Tribune decided to send an additional correspondent to England. They conferred with Henley Hill, assistant managing editor, about offering this new, dangerous job to one of the staff reporters—and suggested that the matter be kept a secret until the job was filled . . . Hill preserved the secret, but somehow, some way, within 3 hours, there were 25 volunteers for the London job.

ONE OF THE MEMBERS of the Star Spangled Ball committee, in charge of getting specialty numbers for the event to be held at the Astor on December 20, was instructed to invite Gypsy Rose Lee. The plan is for the strip-teaser to come dressed in stars, which will be removed one by one, at the rate of $1 per star-strip . . . The committeewoman was unable to locate Gypsy, and decided to phone her husband, a newspaper man, for help . . . "Hello, dear," she told him. "I'm calling to find out whether you know how to reach Gypsy Rose Lee quickly." Then she added: "And if you do, I'll be very angry."

VIRGIL THOMSON, the music critic and composer, has been writing unkind articles about the New York Philharmonic. "I'll get even with Virgil," John Barbiroli threatened, "by playing one of his pieces" . . . Harry Carey will be elevated to costar billing in the new picture, "Shepherd of the Hill" . . . Liberals in the Administration are asking the President to replace Breckenridge Long and Avra Warren, of the State Department, because of the manner in which the visa distribution is being administered. Falangists and Almazanists have been too fortunate in obtaining the precious visas . . . Columba signed Ruth Ford, the young actress who appeared with Orson Welles in his WPA production of "Dr. Faustus."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Dec. 6 (INS).—If Warners will play Santa Claus, Paramount wants George Brent for Christmas—or, to be exact, they want him for the third starring role with Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland in "Skylark." The deal to borrow George has been on the fire a week and it was a mistaken report that they wanted him for "One Night in Lisbon," with Madeleine Carroll. Fred MacMurray is set for that.

PARSONS

Speaking of George, he was noticeably absent from the cocktail party Ann Sheridan gave for the press today, lending credence to the rumors that these two are cooling. In spite of her contract troubles with Warners, Annie, they tell me, was a gracious hostess and showed no signs of worry. She was her old self with plenty of oomph in bright red hostess pajamas. Among the guests were Ann Sothern and Roger Pryor, Pat and Eloise O'Brien, Frank McHugh, Jane Wyman and most of the boys and girls from the newspapers.

Harizell Spence's personal suggestion for the right actor to play his "Practical Parson" father in "One Foot in Heaven" is Raymond Massey. He wrote Jack Warner a most interesting letter about Massey, a copy of which has been forwarded to me. Mr. Spence says: "Last Sunday, quite by accident, I was entertained at the home of Raymond Massey and Ray and I got talking about 'One Foot In Heaven.' Much to my surprise I find that not only is Massey a consummate actor, which I knew, but he is the nephew of a Methodist bishop." He goes on to say: "Amazingly enough, he is father's height, he has father's hands, and he wore clothes as father did—and while he is not quite as handsome as father, that is a minor item."

Two of Hollywood's best known old-timers are getting a break—which is always good news. Harry Langdon will be starred in a series of feature-length comedies, and his femme lead in the first is Betty Blythe. It's titled, "Misbehaving Husbands" and the company is Producers Releasing Corporation, which, I understand, is being backed by Pathe. Harry hasn't had a lot of luck in Hollywood in recent years. Maybe this is the turning point.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: The afternoon press preview of "The Philadelphia Story" was as gala as a first night. Judy Garland came with Mickey Rooney—and while Judy is always very grown up on her dates with Dave Rose, she and Mickey behave like kids. They ate candy all through the show and Judy wore a bow on her hair; Janet Gaynor, an inveterate previewer, came with Adrian; Margaret Lindsay was doing raves over K. Hepburn.

Bill Holden had the flu and his girl friend, Brenda Marshall, spent all her time taking care of him. Now she has it. The Jane Wyman-Ronald Reagan heir is expected New Year's Day; Pittsburgh has been very gay for us with parties galore. The Sun Telegraph gave us a wonderful tea at the William Penn. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bettner, Mr. and Mrs. Royal Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart List were our hosts; I had tea with Judge Morgan, a school friend of mine and the famous woman judge from Sewickly. She brought a friend whose little daughter is at Warm Springs and every letter the child writes she speaks of Sabu's visit there and how much happiness he brought to the youngsters at the home where crippled children can forget they are not like other little ones.

The Notre Dame rooters on the coast are having a smoker after the Examiner Christmas benefit. Frank Fay will be master of ceremonies and among the honorary alumni attending, after their stint at the show, are Don Ameche, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Pat O'Brien; Olivia de Havilland and Jimmy Stewart weren't able to respark their romance. It's definitely over.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

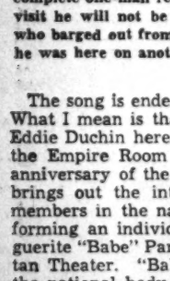
In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

New York, Dec. 6.

You might just as well know the truth, readers. I'm in New York having a little look-see at the shows, shops, and Santa Claus. Some of the finest writers are proving that they're your friends as well as mine.



HOPPER

Taking over, we start off with Mark Hellinger, top columnist for years for most of my rival papers. A few years back Mark became a producer at Warner's. He's turned out nothing but hits—now every columnist wants to follow in his footsteps. But there's only one Hellinger. I could fill the column about him, but he'll fill it better.

DEAR HEDDA: First of all I want to thank you for asking me to do a column for you. I really feel pretty swell about it, because it isn't often that we movie producers get a crack at a thing like this.

In this town, Hedda honey, there's an actor whom we both know very well. People all say he's a very nice guy—and, as nice guys go in the movie racket, people are correct.

Now it so happens that this actor has a brother-in-law whom he has supported for many years. As a matter of fact, when the actor married, his wife's brother went into the agreement—even though the actor didn't realize it at the time. So few of us do, eh, Hedda?

Well, the actor accepted the situation very gracefully. The years flew by and he continued to shell out to his nonworking relative. Very rarely, when he was between engagements, the actor might hint that things weren't going too well for him and that it might not be a bad idea if brother-in-law looked for a job. But his wife's brother merely smiled away any such ideas. He wasn't the kind of guy who'd take woe for an answer.

Came the recent day, however, when the actor grew tired of it all. He'd spent a very tough eight hours at the studio, hanging on to the telephone without a single horse coming in.

Well, Hedda, the actor let loose. He called his brother-in-law names that would have made Jack Oakie blush. He told him to find a job or clear out. The relative hung his head and promised to look for a position the following day.

The next afternoon, the brother-in-law visited the actor at the latter's studio. His speech was jerky, which fitted him perfectly.

"George," he told the actor, "I'm through with all this bumming around. You brought me to my senses yesterday, and I'm going out now and sell jewelry. From this moment on, I'm going to hit the straight and narrow.

"There's only one more favor I'll have to ask of you. They're giving me a sample case full of jewelry, and they require someone to put up a cash bond on it. Would you grant me that extra kindness?"

The actor thought it over for a moment and then agreed. Maybe a miracle would come to pass.

"Okay," he said. "I'll do it."

Some 48 hours later, the brother-in-law again appeared at the actor's house. This time he had his precious sample case with him. He shook hands with the actor, thanked him from the bottom of his heart, and drew a watch from his pocket.

"George," he said honestly, "you've been mighty swell to me through the years. I know I haven't been properly grateful, but—well, maybe I'm a better man now." He extended the watch. "I want to make you a present of this watch.

"Oh, I know it isn't much. But it's all I can afford right now. Some day, perhaps, I'll be able to do better. Please take it."

The actor was impressed. He accepted the present and wished his brother-in-law much luck in the new endeavor. The relative tucked his sample case under his arm and departed . . .

Very soon there was much excitement in the actor's family. Instead of attending to business the brother-in-law had gone off on one of the most beautiful benders in history. And as a result, the jewelry in his sample case was in hock shops from Main Street to Forest Lawn.

This was serious business and the actor took the only way out. So help me, Hedda, he went from hock shop to hock shop and redeemed various articles. And when he had them all collected, he called his brother-in-law and handed him the sample case once again.

The relative looked into the sample case.

"Thanks, George," he said. "Is everything here?"

"Yes," returned the actor curtly. "Everything's there."

His brother-in-law looked up at him.

"Well," he murmured apologetically, "would you mind giving me back that watch I gave you as a present? That belongs in here, too!"

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The signing of Danny Macfayden by the Nats can hardly be classed as a momentous development because at his age Macfayden is not going to pitch any team, much less the Nats, to any pennant. But Bucky Harris sounded genuinely pleased when he was advised that Macfayden was signed, and his elation is thoroughly understandable.

POVICH

"At least he knows how to pitch," said Harris. He sounded as if he wanted to add, "you don't know what I've gone through for the past few years."

It will be, indeed, refreshing for Harris next summer to hand Macfayden a baseball and tell him to go out there and pitch. Harris will know that at least on that afternoon he'll get a smart pitching job, if not a winning one. The Nats' manager won't have to perch catlike on the dugout steps, a-feared that the ball game will vanish with the next pitch or be sabotaged by a dumb-cluck error on the mound.

Harris' has been a thorny job with his pitchers in recent years. Last season, for example, the only man on his pitching staff who knew how to stand correctly on the mound was Dutch Leonard, Harris opened the season with three Cuban pitchers he could scarcely converse with, much less teach.

Ken Chase has been in the majors for six years, but he hasn't learned yet how to field a bunt and he couldn't hold a base runner close to the bag with grappling hooks. Joe Krakauskas said he was a Canadian, but he was wild enough out there on the mound to be one of the Borneo Krakauskases. Both Chase and Krakauskas never did catch on to many of the merest fundamentals of pitching.

Sid Hudson ended the season as the league's rookie sensation, but Harris spent many a harrowing afternoon watching Hudson pitch early in the season. He finally convinced the big boy that it was not necessary to get every pitch over the heart of the plate. Hudson took that advice, learned also how to put one foot on the rubber, and finally developed as a 17-game winner, but Harris had to do a job on him.

No manager in the league is presented with such green peas as Harris, chiefly because the Nats have no tie-up with any club in the high minors. Half of the pitchers in the Nats' Florida camp usually come out of the Cuban canebrakes and the leaky-roof circuits, and would be chased, fortwith, out of most big league camps.

So, as we were saying, it's understandable that Harris welcomes Macfayden to the fold. Danny has been around a long time, 14 years to be exact, and his stock in trade has been his wisdom on the mound. He broke in as a 155-pounder without a fast ball and in his first game he was pited against Walter Johnson. His defeat under those circumstances was scarcely a disgrace.

"I was still playing ball when Macfayden broke in," relates Harris. "He was just a kid out of one of the high schools around Boston, and you had to like him from the first time you hit against him. I banged him for a hit the first time I ever faced him, but during the next three years I was in the league against him, I never saw the same kind of pitch again. He had a great memory.

"If he doesn't get you out with one kind of pitch, he'll give you another, and you never know what it's going to be. He's been getting by for years on his smartness. No runner gets a long lead against Danny and no hitter can take a toe hold. Only a couple of years ago, when he was still with the Bees, he was one of the really fine pitchers of the league."

The Nats would have owned Macfayden two years ago except for an unhappy circumstance, said Harris. His name appeared on the waiver list of the Boston Club, and Clark Griffith in a long distance telephone call to Jack Quinn of the Bees asked if Quinn would let Macfayden go at the waiver price. Quinn said that he would.

"But that afternoon, the Bees were playing the Giants in New York," added Harris. "Quinn didn't know Macfayden was pitching. Danny beat the Giants, 2-1, that day, and the Bees withdrew waiver requests on him."

Macfayden operated under something of a cloud after his initial success with the Red Sox after going into the majors fresh out of high school ranks. With the lowly Boston Club his pitching was so sensational that the Yankees bought him for $50,000. But with the Yanks he was a dismal flop, and he was later returned to Boston at the waiver price.

The impression was that Macfayden, like many another pitcher, could be hot with a second-division club but could not win for a top-ranking club when the pennant pressure was on. But when he passed into the National League and started to pitch sensational ball for the Bees, winning consistently despite the hitting weakness of the Bees, he regained his prestige.

Somehow, Harris still thinks he's a good pitcher.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 6.—G. Preston Marshall, who is about to realize an old ambition by giving his home town of Washington its first pro football playoff, was aroused to (1) pity, (2) contempt, and (3) a pother, when we called him last night and foolishly mentioned that the Chicago Bears are 9-to-5 favorites to scalp Mr. M's Redskins Sunday.

CONSIDINE

"Anyone who bets on pro football is a fool," Marshall confided with a bray which packed all his old penchant for pulling punches. "There are no Michigan versus Harvard games in our league. There's hardly a game played all year in our league which couldn't easily go either way. And, if there is, we try to strengthen the weaker club the following season."

We mumbled some apology for bringing up the 9-to-5 odds.

"And tell them this up there," Marshall broke in accusingly. "We don't want people betting on our games. Let the colleges and baseball have the betting crowds. We'll have no association with gamblers in any form."

Okay . . . Okay . . . Was the game going to be worth while playing, financially?

"Certainly. The league voted to raise the price of playoff tickets last year and I think it's a great idea, particularly when the park is as small as ours is. Our players got only $235 each for winning that great 1937 playoff against the Bears in Chicago. Terrible day, of course, but the trouble was mainly a bad scale of prices for the game. This year, even though the Redskins have voted 36 or 38 full shares—baseball usually votes about 26—each of our players will get about $850 out of the game."

And the Bears . . . ?

"Oh, the losers get about $500. Here's how that melon is cut up. First of all the net gate for this game is going to be $102,276. The money is all in. The tickets are all sold—36,033 of them. That $102,276, as I say, is net. That's after the 10 per cent federal tax has been taken off. Well, then we give 15 per cent rental for Griffith Stadium. Out of the remainder, the playoff teams divided 60 per cent—on a 60-40 basis, winner and loser. An additional 10 per cent of the original net gate, after the park rental is taken out, goes to the Dodgers and Packers, the runnersup in each division. They split that 10 per cent 50-50."

We started to see that this gets confusing after a while.

"Then we start paying our bills," Marshall trampled over us. "You know, railroads, Pullmans, hotels, entertainment, ushers, tickets, advertising, stadium help and so on. If there is anything left, half of it goes to the league and half of it is divided between the two playoff clubs. So, you see, the owners pretty much give this party for the boys, rather than themselves."

Did we hear him say that the Reds would get the winners' share, even despite the . . . ah . . . the . . . ah . . . make-believe wagering. There, we said it!

"Why not?" G. Preston demanded. "The Bears lost three games this season. We beat them, the Cards beat them and the Lions beat them. But we turned around and beat the Cards and Lions. We've lost Bill Young, one of our tackles, and Young Bob Hoffman, who has been looking good in the backfield. But Andy Farkas is back in shape. He'll more than take up that slack. Besides, if the score is close, we'll win."

Howzat . . . ?

"The Bears are a team that must win by a big score. They beat Detroit 7-0 in one of their two games with the Lions, but it wasn't as close as all that. Detroit was fumbling a lot. The Bears won all the others with big scores. Don't ask me why they lose the close ones, except that they do. If I were to guess I'd probably say that there's not too much harmony

JAKE POWELL

Seals Buy Jake Powell From Yanks

Former Washington Player Appeared In Only 12 Games Last Season for N. Y.

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Dec. 6.—Jake Powell, veteran outfielder, was sold today by the New York Yankees to San Francisco Seals in the Pacific Coast League for an unspecified sum of cash.

Powell, who had a lifetime batting average near .290, had been with the Yankees 4½ years and previously had played 2½ years with the Washington Nationals. He was one of the Yankee stars in the 1936 World Series, but subsequently suffered a slump and last season appeared in only 12 games, batting .183. He figured in thre World Series with the Yankees—1936-37-38.

Started Playing Here

His exploits on the Washington sandlots first attracted scouts to Powell. He was a heavy-hitting star of the Takoma Tigers, sandlot champions.

Powell was given a tryout by the Nats and later put in a season with Chattanooga before he was released to the Class B Middle Atlantic League. With Dayton, he proved a consistent hitter and was bought by Joe Cambria, then owner of the Albany club.

At Albany, Powell led the league in hitting and was rebought by the Washington club. With the Nats he clinched a regular outfielding job, holding it for two years until he was traded to the Yankees.

Was World Series Hero

Powell was the Yankees' regular outfielder in 1936-37 and the individual star of the World Series of 1936 when he led all players of the series at bat. His three hits off Carl Hubbell in the first game were a potent factor in the Yankees' defeat of Hubbell in the series.

Last spring, Powell suffered a fractured skull when he collided with an outfield fence in an exhibition game en route from the Yankees' camp, and did not don a uniform again until midseason. He was used chiefly as a pinch hitter.

President's 'Fleet' Hit by Grid Fever In Caribbean Sea

Even President Roosevelt's flotilla of ships cruising in the Caribbean Sea can't escape the fever that is sweeping Washington over the Redskin-Bear championship playoff tomorrow.

Three newspaper correspondents on the press boat following the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, which carries the President, queried local Western Union offices yesterday, asking if there were any way they could pick up the game over their destroyer's radio.

The correspondents—Douglas B Cornell, Associated Press; Tom Reynolds, United Press, and George Durno, International News Service—are aboard the destroyer, U. S. S. Mayrant. A chain of 115 Mutual Broadcasting Co. stations will carry the game to the Nation, but it is doubtful that the ship can pick it up unless a short-wave broadcast is effected. President Roosevelt's party left Kingston, Jamaica, yesterday for an unannounced destination.

No-Trade Rule Hits Tigers, Slows Deals

Atlanta, Dec. 6 (AP).—It was a year ago this week that the American League handcuffed the New York Yankees with its no-trade rule, and though its virus has been passed along now to Detroit, the effect lingers on.

Joe McCarthy, one of the smoothest managers in the business, has been hanging around on the fringe of the minor league meetings all week with his eyes and ears wide open and today he made a deal.

He sent outfielder Jake Powell to San Francisco of the Coast League for approximately the waiver price of $7,500. That hardly could be construed as an impressive first step in the reconstruction of the former champions.

Yardage Basis Recommended By A.A.U. Track

Metric System Used Since 1930; Plan Must Be Approved

By the Associated Press

Denver, Dec. 6.—The National A. A. U. track and field committee recommended today that the outdoor track championships be restored to a yardage basis.

The meet has been run under the metric system since 1930. The committee's recommendation came unanimously on a motion by Pincus Sober, of New York, former quarter-miler at City College of New York.

Boston was recommended by the National Boxing committee as the site for the 1941 tournament for the third year in a row. The committee also discussed a proposal that the United States be divided into seven districts in choosing entrants for the national meet, instead of each of the 41 associations sending champions as at present. Hawaii would be the eighth district.

The general convention tomorrow and Sunday must ratify committee recommendations, but usually there is no opposition.

However, the track committee's decision in the yards vs. meters question must be approved by the legislation committee before reaching the convention floor.

Browns Seek Rick Ferrell, Says Report

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 6.—The Browns, who plucked two first-line pitchers out of the minor league gathering in Atlanta, may try to buy either Frankie Pytlak, of Cleveland, or Rick Ferrell, of Washington, at the major league meeting in Chicago next week.

Vice President William O. de Witt wouldn't disclose which of the major league catchers the Browns want but he did say they are "after an experienced man."

The Brownies, weakest last season on the mound and behind the plate, already have strengthened their pitching with the purchase of Fritz Ostermueller and Dennis Galehouse from the Boston Red Sox.

Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals, said his club "may swing another deal or two" in Chicago, but declined to disclose any advance details. He added any transactions will be "independent" of past deals.

Rickey said that in Catcher Gus Mancuso, obtained from the Brooklyn Dodgers in a deal for Backstop Mickey Owen, the Redbirds had "just the man" for their mound staff.

"Mancuso, a smart, experienced catcher, will be of great help to our pitchers," Rickey declared. "I'm not reflecting on Mickey Owen in saying this, for I consider him a fine catcher, but I believe the deal helped us. We have a very promising young catcher in Walker Cooper. We still have Don Padgett and we now have the veteran Mancuso to round us out."

Big Ten to Vote On Rose Bowl Question Today

Consensus Is That Coast Game Plan Will Be Voted Down

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 6.—The Rose Bowl question was debated again today as Western Conference faculty representatives, athletic directors and coaches opened their annual winter meetings.

The consensus was that the faculty committee will vote tomorrow against the plan for the football champions of the Western and Pacific Coast Conferences to participate annually in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena. It was discussed by the faculty committee and the directors.

Faculty athletic committees at Minnesota Wisconsin, and Purdue are opposed to the plan. Illinois and Northwestern reportedly are against the idea. With Chicago not expected to ballot because it no longer has a football team, this would make a majority of the big nine against sending conference teams westward.

From the various coaches' meetings came the announcement that the Big Ten outdoor track meet had been awarded to Minnesota's Gophers. It will be held May 23-24. The indoor track meet will be held March 7-8 at Purdue, with the conference swimming meet to be held March 7-8 at Iowa.

Jack Doyle Makes Bears 3-5 Favorite

Western Division Champions Arrive Today; Masterson Injured in Practice

By Al Hailey

There was a scarcity of Redskin money in town yesterday, investigation among the Washington wagering gentry revealed.

A hasty survey of the situation failed to uncover a single oddsmaker going down the line with the Redskins to subdue the Chicago Bears tomorrow at Griffith Stadium in the playoff for the world's professional football championship.

Consequently, when the Bears—33 strong—pull into Union Station today at 8:20 a. m., they'll find themselves firmly ensconced in the favorite's seat on just about everybody's book.

"Official" Odds

Here are the "official" odds as related to The Post yesterday from New York by Jack Doyle, Broadway's No. 1 betting commissioner.

Doyle names the Bears the 3-to-5 favorite and the Redskins the 6½-to-5 underdog, if you follow.

This means that if you want to bet on the Bears you have to put up $5 to $3, and that if you bet on the Redskins, you can put up $5 against the Doyle odds of $6.50.

Doyle said his figures were based on the amount of money showing up on each team. They also were affected, he added, by a consideration of the records of both teams—especially since the Redskins' victory over the Bears last month.

If you were in the mood in Washington yesterday, you could have the Redskins and anywhere from 3 to 6½ points. Thus, if you had the former odds and the Bears should win, 3-0, the bet would be off. But if you had the latter figure, you'd win if the Bears should win, 6-0, or the game should end in a 6-6 tie.

Game Time Is 1:30

The odds favoring the Bears, however, will be in a state of flux until game time tomorrow, 1:30 p. m.

The fact that the Redskins hold a 7-to-3 victory over the Chicagoans already this year was being tossed aside as the Bears entrained for Washington.

The Bears worked out of doors in Chicago yesterday for the first time in two weeks and were reported to be in top shape. They'll work out this afternoon at the stadium, after the 'Skins morning drill.

Bob Swisher, 165-pound halfback and one of the speediest men on the Bear squad, was back in form and reported to be showing no signs of his knee injury.

On the other side of the picture, the Redskins suffered a heavy blow when Bob Masterson, veteran left end, pulled a muscle in his leg during the morning workout at the ball park.

The Redskins, with only 32 men eligible for the championship playoff, sorely need every man on the squad and the loss of Masterson would seriously affect their chances against the Bears.

The big 210 pounder has been a bulwark on defense all year and

Tom Harmon Says:

By Bob Considine

This is the sixth of a series of interviews in which Tommy Harmon, of Michigan, America's No. 1 gridiron star, tells behind-the-scene anecdotes about his outstanding games of the 1940 season.

By Bob Considine.

"The best, hardest-charging team I played against all year was Northwestern," swears Tommy Harmon, when he sits back and stirs up his 1940 memories. "They hit me harder, and their line charged lower and harder than any other club. Minnesota beat them by one point and beat us by one point. But I think the records will show that both of us had better teams than the Gophers."

Red Grange, whose seemingly unbreakable touchdown record Harmon had been approaching each week of the 1940 season, went to Ann Arbor to see Harmon play against the Wildcats. It was the first time the old Galloping Ghost had seen the boy who has been called his reincarnation.

Grange saw plenty of Harmon that day, even if Northwestern did not. Red, and 76,748 other spectators, saw him score his thirtieth touchdown to come within one of Red's 15-year-old record. Tommy gained 95 yards through and around Northwestern's line that day, kicked two points after touchdowns and blended his identity with other Michigan stalwarts who rose up near the end to stop a Wildcat team that was en route to the tying touchdown. Michigan won that game, 20-13, and for the only time during 1940 was outstatisticked.

Just a Player

"I was just another fellow out there that day," Tommy says. "Bob Westfall and our sophomore, Tippy Lockard, who is going to be a real star, did all the worthwhile ball-carrying that day."

Grange came to the Michigan locker room after the game to meet Harmon. The two most publicized players in modern college football history shook hands and Grange complimented Harmon at great length. We asked Tommy what Red had said to him. He couldn't remember, except that "he sure was nice. What a player he must have been!"

Tommy was surprised to find out how easy Bill Decorrevont, the most publicized high school player of all time, was to bring down. "He's shifty all right," Harmon remembers, "but when you hit him he doesn't have much drive. I guess that's why they can't use him much on bucks."

Harmon broke the Grange record in his final game and finished his career in a blaze of glory that would

Georgia Routs Miami, 28-7

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 6.—Paced by Frankie Sinkwich, brilliant sophomore back, Georgia's Bulldogs tonight defeated Miami's Hurricane's 28 to 7, before a crowd of 11,860.

The Hurricane held Georgia in check the first half, while the Miamians generated one touchdown march in the second period.

But Georgia came out fast in the second half and Sinkwich helped roll up three touchdowns before the varsity retired for third stringers.

Steiner set up the first Bulldog touchdown with whirling off tackle slants to the Miami 29, then passed to Dudish on the two. Sinkwich smashed tackle to score.

A few plays later, Sinkwich got loose for 57 yards, but a clipping penalty nullified the touchdown. But two passes put it on the Miami five, and Allen went over.

Sinkwich topped off his night's performance with a 22-yard touchdown in the fourth period.

Storck Will Demand Changes in League

Carl Storck, president of the National Football League, is prepared to attack "certain evils" when the league club owners assemble here on Monday.

At a press conference yesterday, Storck declared that the drafting and handling of drafted players from college ranks is not satisfactory as now done.

"The custom of the poorer clubs selling their early choices in the draft to richer clubs defeats the purpose of the college draft," said Storck. "The draft is designed to strengthen the weaker clubs by giving them first choice.

Carl Storck

"I don't know what measures can be taken, but perhaps we can revise the rule and compel teams which draft headline stars to keep them on the squad at least a year. That would strengthen the weaker teams and at the end of a year they may be more reluctant to sell."

The league president also declared that serious consideration would be given to the complaint that drafted players have no choice as to the team they join. "It is natural," he said, "that the best college players would not like to join a last-place club which has first choice in the draft."

Storck will ask the club owners to adopt a rule preventing any such recurrence of last week when the Philadelphia Eagles played the Redskins with only two days' rest after meeting Pittsburgh.

"I will ask the club owners for a rule forbidding any team to schedule a league game without six days' rest," said Storck.

Another plan which Storck will carry into the meeting concerns the player limit. He will recommend that the teams be forbidden to release players in quantity toward the end of the season after they are out of the championship race.

"We have a maximum of 33 players for each team," said Storck, "and a minimum of 22. Teams which do not carry enough reserves toward the finish of the season do

Veteran Material at G. W. Boosts Its Basketball Outlook

Bill Reinhart Hopes to See Jinx Broken

Expects His Colonial Five to Better Last Year's Record of 13 Victories This Season

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Coach Bill Reinhart's George Washington University cagers have won 13 games each of the past three seasons. This year he thinks they'll get over the hump.

No, the schedule is not any easier, tougher if anything, but Bill has a 13-man squad at the G-Street school, seven or eight good enough to make the first team and as a whole they are big, fast, ball hawks and natural courtmen.

The 22-game schedule with Davidson a recently added starter, is packed with crack teams through the East and Midwest, led by the Oklahoma Aggies and St. John's of Brooklyn. The Davidson game will be played December 16 at Tech, following next Saturday's opener with Washington and Lee in Lexington.

Scrimmage Brewers

The Colonials are rounding into shape for a big December fling, and are reported to be much further advanced than at this time last year. Reinhart has had the boys scrimmaging with the Washington Brewers and American U. in practice sessions and a full week of afternoon workouts this week should put the boys in shape for the opener with the Generals, always hard to beat on their home court.

Reinhart lost George Garber, all-District player and Reds Auerbach from last year's regulars, and Lud Urick and Mike Aronson, reserves, but the sophomores figure to take up the slack. The senior year performances of Garber and Auerbach were not up to their soph and junior standards.

Reinhart has not yet included any of his sophomores in his starting line-up, but they are there if needed. Joe Gallagher, who won the most valuable player award in the Metropolitan tournament while at St. John's, and Walt Sether, 195-pound, 6-foot-2 blond from Medford, Oreg., look good. Sether is a particularly good first-year prospect, just a little green.

Myers a Standout

But we haven't touched the cream of the sophomores, Jim Myers, from Evansville, Ind., the hotbed of high school basketball, where he was chosen All-State forard and the outstanding player in the big State tournament. Myers suffered a slight ankle sprain while working with the team at the University of Richmond clinic and will be out for a day or two.

The tentative first team will be made up of three juniors and two seniors, three of them over 6-2. Joe Comer, the former Roosevelt High product whose main drawback is lack of stamina, will take a forward post with Charley Jones, a high school teammate of Center Bobby Gilham in the same Evansville, Ind., school, where Myers matriculated. Jones has developed into a dependable ball hawk. Gilham was second-high scorer to Auerbach last year.

Lou Veltri, who, with Gilham, gives the squad speed, will hold down a guard berth with Matt Zunic. The boys are from Beaver Falls and New Kensington, Pa., respectively. Zunic and Comer are the seniors on the team.

In addition to Myers, Gallagher and Sether on the reserve list, two other local sophomores may get quite a play—Ralph Matera, of Eastern, and Len Sokol, Central. Eddie Amendola, the No. 1 reserve last year, could make it hot for one of the regulars who hopes to keep a steady job, while Roy McNeil, Roosevelt, and Red Rein, sophomores from Brooklyn, should see ample action.

Reinhart hopes to better his five-year average of 71 victories and 25 defeats in real big-time basketball competition and District fans will have a better chance to watch the Oregon mentor work with the boys. Forthis year 11 home games will be played in Riverside Stadium, with its new floor and glass backboards, where in addition to the Aggies and Johnnies, Minnesota, Georgetown, Kansas State, West Virginia and Virginia will show their wares.

Washington and Lee and Davidson come first but the big thing in the boys' minds is to bump off the powerful Oklahoma Aggies as a pre-Christmas upset for the basketball dopesters. The Aggies won their conference title, 26 out of 29 games and went to the semifinals of the Madison Square Garden tourney last year, and they were by far the best team to show here.

G. W. won 13 and lost 4 in 1937-38, 13 and 8 in 1938-39, and 13 and 6 in 1939-40. But it's a good bet they'll never stop at 13 this season. Goal to go.

not play fair with their fans. I believe the minimum must be raised, appreciably."

Commenting on the disposition of full shares by the players of the Eastern and Western division titles, and apprised that the Redskins had voted Andy Farkas only a half share, Storck said:

"The league has no jurisdiction over the distribution of player shares, but I believe that it should have. We are patterning our administration after big league baseball, and like baseball, we should have authority to remedy any injustices in the voting of shares."

Auburn, Villanova Gridders Tangle

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 6 (AP).—Auburn and Villanova football teams meet here tomorrow in an intersectional clash that ends the season for both teams.

The plainsmen are favorites to win for the second consecutive year. Last year Auburn won, 10-9, after tie games in two previous meetings.

9,000 to See W.-L., Gonzaga Meet Today

Arlington Charity Game Will Feature Duel Of Armand and Ruba

Without a championship at stake, but promising one of the most hotly contested scholastic battles of the season, the grid forces of Gonzaga High and Washington-Lee meet today in Arlington for the benefit of the Arlington Monarch Club's summer camp fund. Kickoff time will be 1:30 p. m.

No less than 9,000 fans are expected to jam into Washington-Lee's enlarged stadium to see the pair of powerful rivals battle. Already half the available seats have been sold in a huge advance sale.

Most of the 9,000 spectators will be drawn out to see the individual battle between Russ Arnaud and Elmer Raba, members of The Washington Post's mythical All-Metropolitan backfield. Two better performers have seldom glared at one another across a line of scrimmage, and the outcome of today's clash will probably be decided on which star is having his best day.

Going into hostilities the Little Generals of W.-L. are conceded a faint edge, largely because of a superior record during the regular schedule. They came out of eight engagements with six victories and two losses, while Gonzaga was able to account for only four triumphs, a pair of ties and two losses.

An added entry in the field goal kicking contest which will highlight half-time entertainment was announced yesterday, George Washington's Dan Snyder joining six other kickers of note. His foes will be Augie Lio and Bill Nealon of Georgetown; Pete Sachon and Mike Cherello, of C. U.; Harry Deming, former G. W. tackle, and Gus Welsh, former Carlisle Indian quarterback.

By way of stimulating interest in today's game, which seems to be well stimulated already, three bands will parade through the streets of Arlington starting at 12:15, later entering the W.-L. field in a body.

Bethesda Five Rallies To Beat Hyattsville

First Scholastic Court Game in Vicinity Thrills Full House as Winners Come From Behind Five Times and Win Out, 33-31

The first scholastic basketball game in the vicinity yesterday set a record in thrills that future battles may have trouble beating, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's youthful cagemen pulling out a 32-31 victory over Hyattsville after a long and ardous comeback.

With a full house at the Bethesda gym looking on, the Barons went ahead for the first time in the game with only 5½ minutes of action left, dropped behind five times, and finally won when Hyattsville's Keith Tadlock missed a foul shot that would have deadlocked matters.

Young Dick Poerstal, a newcomer to the B.-C. C. five from the junior varsity, provided the Barons' margin of victory. His tap shot with 20 seconds left won the game, but twice before he had given his mates slender margins with timely points.

Against a fast-breaking Hyattsville club, Bethesda got off to a snail-like start. After one quarter it trailed, 6-4, and at the half the count was 17-11 favoring Hyattsville. Gradually the eventual winners came into their own, bringing their deficit to a mere 21-17 going into the last stanza. The count was finally 23-22 for the invaders when Bobby Keene, one of three holdovers on the Bethesda squad, put his team out front. A wild circus shot turned the trick. From then on it was a see-saw battle to the wire.

Greenbelt High Opens Season

Greenbelt High School opened its basketball season yesterday with a 23-13 victory over National Training School on the Greenbelt courts.

Dave Taylor and Leroy Clark, each with 8 points, led the winners' attack. No losing player scored more than 3 points. All Clark's points were made in the first half, while Taylor tallied all of his four baskets in the second half.

The half-time count favored Green belt at 17-7.

on that team. Too many stars, and stars are inclined to beef at one another when the going gets tough."

Your team has stu . . . I mean has looked bad lately.

"That's easily explained," easily explained Marshall. "We had too much easy sailing at the start of the year. When the tough games came along we had a big lead and our boys knew that they had the big ace in the hole: which was a final game against the Eagles. Probably took a little drive and will-to-win out of them, when they thought about their ace. We'll be all right. But speaking of aces, if you see Ace Parker tell him he's a fool for considering big league baseball. A football player as good as Ace should rest all summer, saving himself for the football season. His future and his real earning capacity is in football. He shouldn't endanger it. You notice Baugh gave up baseball . . . And he's doing pretty good."

Well . . . thanks. See you Sunday.

"You'll see more than me Sunday. You'll see the largest newspaper and radio coverage for a sports event in the history of the South. Much more than when the Senators played the Giants in the World Series in 1933. We've even sold our radio rights. Got $2,500. Some day we'll get $50,000. Yes, and you'd better stay over for that draft meeting Monday, and see John Kimbrough, instead of Tommy Harmon, named No. 1. Good-by."

Gallaudet Five Loses 65-38, to Susquehanna

Blues Outclassed After First Period; Ludovico, Duick Star

Special Dispatch to The Post

Selins Grove, Pa., Dec. 6.—Battling throughout the 40 minutes of play, Gallaudet College bowed to a lanky Susquehanna University quintet, 65-38, here tonight. Except for the first period, Gallaudet was outclassed by the Selins Grove collegians. In the initial quarter, the visitors held a one-point lead until shortly before the canto ended, when Susquehanna was ahead, 11-10.

Phil Templin, 6-foot 3-inch Crusader center, was a thorn in Gallaudet's side in the second and third periods. Gallaudet trailed, 26-16, at half time, after Templin started his twin-pointer barrage. The lanky pivot man collaborated with Ford, Susquehanna captain, to put the Susquehanna five in the lead, 51-25, at the end of the third chukker.

The Susquehanna reserves and the visitors battled through a tight fourth quarter, but the Gallaudet attack had lost its momentum in the three previous gruelling periods.

Duick, who entered the Gallaudet line-up as a substitute, was the spearhad of his team's offense, as well as a bulwark on defense. He teamed with the speedy Ludovico to earin scoring honors for the losers with seven points.

Heinicke Tops List of Runners For Marathon

Entries for the Washington A. A. annual cross-country run to be held on the Rock Creek Golf Club course, Sixteenth and Underwood Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 2 o'clock, have been received from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, as well as from the local group of harriers.

Don Heinicke, of the Stonewall Democratic Club of Baltimore, winner of the Fourth of July marathon here for the past two years, appears to top the list of out-of-town hill and dale stars, but he will have a worthy challenger in Johnny Leiss, of the Washington A. A., and also in Roy Marjama, star harrier of Wisconsin University last year in the Big Ten collegiate group, who is now running under the colors of the W. A. A.

Local interest, also, is centered in just what Mike Lynch, veteran of over two-score years of distance running, and who can still take the measure of many of the local boys, will uncork. The Rock Creek course has been his training area for two decades and his running may well add to the chances for the Washington A. A. to win the coveted team trophy.

Arlington Pharmacy is in front with Sher & Cohen next, and Martin's in the third spot.

ARCADE

In the Ladies' Independent meet at Arcadia it was Mary Esten, Greyhounds, who rolled the high game of 153 while Anna Daut, Fleischmann's Yeast, and Mabelle Hering, D. D. W.'s, divided set honors with 339 each. Kidwell's Senators kept up their winning ways, taking all team top counts with 549 and 1,549 and three wins as well from opponents and still are in top position.

The Commerce Department's ladies and men rolled at Arcadia with Miss Edelkamp, C. A. A., leading the fair sex with tops of 122-304 which helped her team to high game of 491 although S. & D. C. were too strong for set, which they took with a 1,837 pinfall. In the men's loop, Redmond, C. A. A. got the game with 132 as Ticee, Patent Office, rolled high set of 372, which was the big boost to his team to take highs of 554 and 1,642. C. A. A. has a one game lead over the Patent Office lads by virtue of 3 straight over the Weather Bureau boys.

Loretta Mansfield, Chi Sigma No. 1, and Mary Heine, Lambda Sigma Delta, were the best sorority sisters in the Intersorority meet at Brookland, getting game and set counts of 122 and 330, respectively. Not to be outdone, Emily MacWilliams, Chi Sigma No. 1, tied the set mark with her own nice 330, which helped her girls take team top pinfalls with 520 and 1,506. Alpha Zeta Beta is in first position and also took three straight from opponents.

PENN RECREATION

The Call Carl, Inc., boys watched as H. Henn, Mechanics, scratched out high game of 144 for himself at Penn Recreation and C. R. Ward, Road Service, took the set with a nice 353. Brightwood Branch was best in the team game department, getting 528 to top, but were unable to keep Body & Trim from going on to set with 1,539. Northeast Branch leads with 24-9 with Road Service next with 19-14.

CONVENTION HALL

Ike Hottel's 155 and Pinky Bradt's 373 were the best efforts by individuals in the G. A. O. loop's rolling at Convention Hall. The Postal quintet excelled for the night with 659 and 1,702.

SILVER SPRING

In the Silver Spring ladies' rolling at Hugh Arbaugh's drives Miss Newton, Logan Motors and Mary Norris, Silver Spring Standard, were best, respectively. Kresge whitewashed Silver Spring Bakery. Shepherd Park leads the loop, followed by Silver Spring Standard.

COLUMBIA

It was Barrow, Agriculture Farmers, who was top man for game in the Census Men's meeting at Columbia, rolling 142 to lead Parker, Geography, bowled a 363 top set for the night but Barrow's high was the big push that gave his team high pinfalls of 582 and 1,598. The two leaders, General Information and Agriculture Ranchers, dropped two each to their foes of the night, but Geography took all three contests from Populaion No. 3.

Odds Makers Pick Chicago Over Redskins

Bears Arrive Today For Title Game; Bob Masterson Hurt

one of the leading pass receivers and extra point kickers. His outstanding play boosted him from the second period eleven to the starting position in midseason. Coach Ray Flaherty, hoping for the best, said he doesn't yet know how serious Masterson's injury is and that he hopes to have him in shape to play tomorrow.

Masterson was sent to the showers as soon as he pulled the muscle in the morning signal drill.

The Redskin squad has been cut down to 32 eligibles through the fact that Fullback Don Irwin, recently recalled to the active roster, has failed to play in a game this season and therefore doesn't qualify for the championship playoff.

Andy Farkas, however, will play. Flaherty said Andy has been looking better every day and that he is certain to see some action. Farkas' 2½ minutes of play against the Giants in New York qualified him for the game.

If Masterson fails to get in shape for tomorrow's game, the squad will be cut down to 30. Bob Hoffman, rookie blocking back, has an injured knee that in all probability won't permit him to play.

Meanwhile, it developed that the Bear-Redskin playoff will develop into a laboratory study for the coaches of the two collegke teams which meet in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day—Stanford and Nebraska.

Biff Jones, Nebraska coach, will arrive in Washington tomorrow for a bit of remote control scouting. The Stanford attack, as used by Clark Shaughnessy, is almost identical to that of the Bears.

Both Use Same Formation

Both use the "T" formation with the man-in-motion, and basically are the same.

George Halas, president and coach of the Bears, informed Carl Storck here that Shaughnessy was in Chicago and that he, Halas, was trying to persuade the Stanford coach to come to Washington with him.

Storck, president of the National Professional Football League, arrived yesterday at the Willard Hotel. Halas and his Bears will stay at the Mayflower Hotel while in Washington.

Expecting the Redskins to spring a whirlwind passing attack on them with Sam Baugh as the mainspring, the Bears all week have been perfecting their pass defense and building up a forward pass attack of their own, reports from Chicago stated.

Chicago will have five passers throwing them over the heads of the Redskins—Sid Luckman, Bernie Masterson, George McAfee, Bob Snyder and Sollie Sherman. Baugh will be aided by Frank Filchock, who's back in top shape after a two-week stay in the hospital, and possibly by Rookie Roy Zimmerman.

Tomorrow's game has been a sellout since Monday, and the 35,-752 customers have contributed a net gate of $101,500. As a matter of fact, it'll be easier tomorrow to get into the White House than it will be at Griffith Stadium if you don't have a ticket.

Second Meeting of Titlists

Tomorrow will mark the second meeting of a Bear and Redskin team for the world's championship.

The Redskins won the Eastern division championship in 1937 and went to Chicago to win the league title over the Bears, 28-21. This fact, plus the 7-3 beating handed them here by the Redskins November 17 has sharpened the Chicagoans' desire for revenge. It'll be quite a football game tomorrow.

At stake, in addition to the winner's share of 60 per cent of the net gate, will be the Ed Thorp Memorial Trophy symbolic of the world's championship.

Also at stake will be the winning team's right to represent the National League in two all-star games. The first of these will be December 29 in Los Angeles' Gilmore Stadium in which the league champions meet an all-star pro team, consisting of three men from each of the ten league clubs.

College Stars to Be Met

The second, and most lucrative, will be the pro champions against the graduated College All-Stars in Chicago's annual preseason classic next August.

Both games are conducted by newspapers for charity. In Los Angeles the pay per participating player is a flat $150 plus expenses. In Chicago the pro players get paid their regular salaries by the championship club.

Should the Redskins lose to the Bears tomorrow, Coach Flaherty would automatically become the coach for the pro all-stars in the Los Angeles game. The league rule is that the coach of the losing team in the playoff becomes the stars' coach at an unpublicized stipend.

If the Redskins win tomorrow they will break camp next week and spend a few days at home. Then they'll report to Flaherty in Los Angeles about December 18 for ten days of practice.

Eagles' Clever Attack Turns Back New York Rovers, 4 to 3

3,282 Watch Washington Increase Lead

Mailley and Burrage Lead Attack as D. C. Six Wins Its Eleventh Game; Charity Aided

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles treated 3,282 paying customers to one of their cleverest exhibitions of hockey last night at Riverside Stadium to outclass the New York Rovers, 4-3, and extend their Eastern Amateur League lead to the runaway proportions of four full games.

The match, which donated 10 per cent of its net receipts to The Washington Post Neediest Fund, was not nearly so close as the score indicates, for the Eagles, armed with a 4-2 lead, loafed throughout most of the final period.

Until the Rovers scored their third goal with little less than three minutes to play of the last period, Washington was content to rest on its lead. Then with their advantage threatened the locals sprang to life and were threatening to tally when the game ended.

Eagles Increase Lead

The victory, Washington's eleventh in 13 matches of one of the hottest streaks in recent league history, boosted the Eagles eight points ahead of the Rovers and Orioles who remain tied for second place with 14 points.

As is usually the case when the Eagles and Rovers meet, the action was fast but clean, with only one foul detected—that a minor penalty for tripping against Walter Hamilton, of New York, in the second period.

The Rovers bottled Norm Burns, high scoring Washington wingman more effectively than in any previous match, but reliable, old Len Burrage and Frank Mailley took up the slack in leading the Eagles to victory. Burrage, the league's best scoring defenseman in 1939 and currently running ahead of his last year's total, figured in three of the four Washington goals, while Mailley scored twice. The other two points were credited to Ross Rossignol, rookie center, and Hal Dewey, who is rounding into condition after reporting late and out of shape.

Eagles Score Early

The Eagles scored the first goal of the match at 6:15 as Burrage, the league's leading assist maker, set up a shot for Dewey directly in front of the Rovers' net. Dewey was so close upon Goalie Johnny Fischer that the latter had no opportunity to block the puck.

After Wahington had engineered several promising but futile drives, the New York club knotted the count at 12:08, when Dartnell, top scorer of the league, according to latest official statistics, feinted around Defense McCurry and beat Goalie Hemming with a hard, high one.

Previously Hemming had turned in a pair of sparkling saves to prevent goals by Dartnell and Hamilton after clever New York passing had placed the puck in scoring position.

Washington, its line-up revised by injuries, dominated the early minutes of the period but was on the defense shortly before the Rovers scored and until the end of the session. With Jack MacBeth still hobbling on a bad heel, Jimmy McCurry, normally a defense, was playing wing in the Eagles' forward line.

Teams Step Up Pace

The pace quickened in the second period and the Eagles took a 4-2 lead largely through the efforts of Burrage, who contributed his second and third assists, and Mailley, who knocked in a couple of goals.

The first period tie of 1-1 was broken at 3:59 when Burrage broke through the Rovers' defense and as he was pushed to the ice, passed to Courteau, who relayed it to Rossignol. Cutting across in front of the goal, Rossignol took Courteau's pass from the right corner and backhanded it into the net.

Burrage again started a scoring play for Washington in the eighth minute of play. The crafty local defense dribbled down the ice and let fly a shot which was blocked by Goalie Fischer. The puck rebounded to Burrage, but his second shot also was checked, and this time the rubber disk skidded to Rossignol and he fed it to Mailley. Then as Burrage stood in front of the New York net acting as a screen, Mailley flung in a 20-footer from the corner.

Rovers Cut Foes' Lead

The Rovers reduced their deficit to 2-3 about eight minutes later on a luck-tainted long shot by Kreller. After Goalie Hemming had repelled a pair of dangerous New York sorties and the threat seemed ended, Kreller walloped the puck from 30 feet out and it glanced off Hemming's shoe and into the cage.

For the next three minutes then, Washington gave Goalie Fischer a horrible time of it as they kept puck inside the Rovers' blue line the entire time. It was inevitable that the Eagles would score and they did, finally, as Fischer was sprawled on the ice after making a save. The score was by Mailley, assisted by McCurry and Burrage, each of whom had taken a shot previously.

Irish, Trojans Top Seasons Grid Finales

80,000 Expected to See Notre Dame Battle U. S. C. at Los Angeles

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—College football, having ruled the sports world for 10 weeks, bows out for 1940 tomorrow with scattered games through the South and Far West. When next the crowds gather for the bowl games it will be New Year's Day, 1941.

Tomorrow's biggest throng—probably 80,000—will watch the annual struggle between Notre Dame and Southern California at Los Angeles, with the next largest witnessing the Southwest Conference finale between Rice and Southern Methodist at Houston.

In many a past year the game between the Irish and the Trojans at Los Angeles had to be played before the mythical national championship could be awarded or even discussed intelligently, but football's shifting fortunes have made of it just another contest this time.

Notre Dame lost its last two starts against Iowa and Northwestern, while Southern California, last year's Rose Bowl winner, never got in the Pacific Coast race this season. Notre Dame looks like a last-minute favorite, as half-dozen Southern California regulars are reported victims of the influenza epidemic in that section.

The Rice-Southern Methodist brawl should prove hot and heavy, as the winner will tie the Texas Aggies for the southwest Conference title and might—just possibly—receive an invitation to play Fordham in the Cotton Bowl. The Aggies are favored to get the bid, however. Southern Methodist has been beaten only by the Aggies this season, while Rice lost to the Aggies and to Tulane.

The Texas longhorns, who turned in one of the year's biggest upsets by snapping Texas A. & M.'s long victory string last week, have made the long trip to Gainesville to play the University of Florida, and it is doubtful that the 'Gators are strong enough to stop Coach Dana Bible's pupils.

Auburn, the only team to tie, much less beat Mississippi State in the past campaign, closes its long schedule against Villanova at Montgomery, Ala. South Carolina and the Citadel wind up their affairs at Charleston.

Lio, of Georgetown, Makes KateSmith's All-America Team

Agostino (Augie) Lio, Georgetown University guard, gained additional football honors last night when selected to a second team berth on Kate Smith's annual All-American squad, which is picked by a committee of outstanding coaches including Wallace Wade and Lyn Waldorf.

Lio previously had been chosen on the first teams of All-America squads by the New York Sun, Hearst Boston Post Collier's and Paramount News, and on the Life and International News second teams. Also Lio repeated for the second year on the Associated Press All-Eastern team.

Brooklyn Fighter Boasts Five Victories Here; To Meet Joe Spangler

Carl Dell, hard-hitting lightweight stablemate of Joey Archibald, was booked yesterday for an eight-round semiwindup bout with Joey Spangler, greatly improved Richmond fighter, on the Turner Arena card featuring Archibald and Billy Banks Monday night, December 16.

Dell, former international Golden Gloves champion, hails from Brooklyn, and is undefeated locally in five matches. Among his victims are El Brookman and Frankie Wills. Spangler, according to his manager, Roy Phaup, has won eight straight. The Virginian, also a product of the Golden Gloves ranks, holds victories over Norment Quarles, Irish Eddie Dunne, Tommy Sharkey, Vic Finnazzo, Johnny Duca and has a draw with Ivan Nedomatsky, former Maryland University boxing star.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez plans to bring in Archibald for several days of training next week, and Dell is expected to drill with the former world's featherweight champion.

Meanwhile Banks, 19-year-old colored star who has won 32 out of 34 matches, is training daily at the Huron gym, and may be viewed going through his training chores starting at 12:30 p. m.

Yardage Basis Recommended By A.A.U. Track

Metric System Used Since 1930; Plan Must Be Approved

Snyder, Philadelphia, perennial advocate of abolishing the metric system, expressed confidence that yardage supporters would triumph.

Dr. Olds said no site for the 1941 track and field meet would be decided on "for probably two or three months."

"Des Moines, Akron, Ohio, and Denver all have made feelers for it," he said.

John J. Sheehan, who presented Boston's bid for the boxing meet again, urged adoption of the eight district elimination plan on the ground that a smaller entry list "would be less likely to injure the boys' health."

New Plan in 1942

Sam D. Otis, sports editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and a committee member, argued that the regional meets would result in "the same congested conditions as at the National," and said, "A better plan of cutting the entry list can be worked out."

The boxing committee voted late in the day to place the regional plan in operation in 1942. The vote was 8 to 7. A committee will be appointed later to "work out all the problems connected with the regional plan."

At the present time more than 200 entrants are sent to the national boxing tournament.

The junior tournament for next year was awarded to Philadelphia, either just prior to or following the senior meet.

Denver was awarded the national basketball tournament for March 16-22 for the seventh straight year.

The basketball committee recommended that a committee be appointed to meet with college and Y. M. C. A. groups to standardize rules.

A. A. U. rules differ from the intercollegiate code and the A. A. U. has no representation on the national basketball rules committee.

Since 1941 will be the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of basketball, the committee urged that each association set aside one contest during the season in memory of the late Dr. James Naismith, inventor of the game.

80,000 to See Irish Battle Trojans Today

Notre Dame Favored to Win Renewal of 15-Year-Old Feud; Illness Has Plagued Southern California

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 6.—Football forces of Notre Dame and the University of Southern California hardly can boast of outstanding gridiron records for 1940, but 80,000 fans will turn out tomorrow to see another chapter unfold in their colorful rivalry.

The fightin' Irish, seeking revenge for defeats in their last two skirmishes with the Trojans, roll into Los Angeles at noon tomorrow primed and favored to win. But anything can happen in this 15-year-old feud of the gridiron.

Past records of the season—Notre Dame's impressive beginning and sudden loss of two games; the Trojans' three wins, three defeats, two ties—are forgotten when the kick-off signal sounds.

Last word from the Notre Dame temporary training camp at Tucson, Ariz., was that the Irish's Saggau, Peipul, Juzwik and company were in good shape.

Trojans Hit by Flu

Reports on the Trojan chances came, not from the practice field, but a hospital. All week the men of Troy have been plagued by influenza. At one time 15 men were down. Today a dozen continued to remain indoors.

Prospects brightened, however, with the promise that Ben Sohn, giant guard, and Right Halfback Jack Banta could take a final workout. Carl Benson, the running guard, probably will be ready tomorrow. U. S. C. may line up at full strength, but it may be up to Trojan subs to keep U. S. C. in the ball game.

Notre Dame Holds Secret Workout

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 6 (AP).—Notre Dame's football forces went through a hard workout behind locked gates today before leaving for Los Angeles and tomorrow's intersectional clash with the Trojans of Southern California.

Coach Elmer Layden and his squad of 33 players will reach Los Angeles at noon. Their train is scheduled to stop in Pomona, Calif., to permit a light workout in the morning.

Layden expressed belief the Irish had an even chance of victory.

Big Six Votes To Abandon Cage Play-Offs

Team With Best Offense Record to Be Chosen In Case of Deadlock

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Dec. 6.—Big Six faculty representatives voted to abandon conference basketball playoffs to determine the league's National Collegiate tournament representatives today and decided that if title ties prevail in the future one club will be chosen.

A year ago Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma all shared in the crown and the three staged a two-day playoff at Wichita, Kans., for the right to compete in the N. C. A. A. Kansas won and emerged as the runner-up to Indiana for the National title.

In case of future deadlocks the quintet with the widest margin of difference between its own offense and that of its opponents' will be chosen.

The new rule was approved by the athletics directors and was passed in a joint meeting of the two groups.

The faculty fathers chose Dr. H. H. King, of Kansas State, as their delegate to the national meeting in New York City.

Nebraska Gets Swim Meet

The directors spent the afternoon attempting to arrange their 1944 and 1945 football dates after setting the times for minor sports at a morning meeting.

Nebraska was awarded the swimming and outdoor track meets, the former coming on February 28 and March 1 and the latter May 23 and 24.

The indoor track meet was returned to Kansas City for March 1 with Gwinn Henry, Kansas athletic director, in charge. The 1941 wrestling titles will be decided at Kansas State March 7 and 8.

Directors also abolished golf and tennis tournaments. Team championships will be decided on dual meet performances.

Both the Big Six and Missouri Valley Conference officials took cognizance of the national defense program. The Big Six chiefs pledged their aid in fostering health and body-building schedules for their students.

Wichita Discussed

The valley loop ruled none of its athletes would be penalized by loss of eligibility for competing in a sport while in military service.

Valley faculty representatives discussed admittance of Wichita University as a new member, replacing Washburn, whose withdrawal becomes effective January 1. A final decision was postponed until the spring meeting.

Athletic directors of that circuit spent the day trying to evolve a round-robin football schedule for the seven-school organization. Washington University, previously reported as on the verge of giving up the gridiron sport, was being included in the 1941 schedules.

Two Yacht Clubs Announce New Officers for 1941

Two yacht clubs in the Chesapeake and Potomac River area yesterday announced new officers for the 1941 season.

Jacob H. Jacobson, former vice commodore of the Corinthian Yacht Club, largest in this territory, was named commodore to succeed Dr. G. Bache Gill, who held the post the last three years. Commodore Jacobson is owner of the 33-foot cruiser Spica.

Robert W. Billups, former rear commodore, was elected vice commodore; Edward A. Zimmerman rear commodore; Lewin W. Walker, recording secretary for his thirteenth term, and William H. Wiegering, corresponding secretary; Emory Galliher, Clarence Ingling and Frank Schroff were named to the board of directors.

The West River Yacht Club, meeting at the Raleigh Hotel, elected William M. Fithian commodore, succeeding Robert M. Sime. J. Roy Crockett was named vice commodore; Grier J. Hufford, rear commodore; William P. Pugh, secretary-treasurer and Harry E. Smith fleet captain.

New members of the board of governors are William E. Richardson and Charles D. McGregor.

D. C. Approved Cage Officials Hold Meeting

More Than 50 Coaches Attend Confab at 'Y;' Changes Discussed

More than 50 coaches of local high school, college and sandlot basketball teams, as well as referees, turned out last night at the Y. M. C. A. as the D. C. Approved Board of Basketball Officials staged its annual meeting for the interpretation of new rules.

Four major changes in the regulations which governed the 1939-40 playing of the game were discussed. A total of 84 changes, however, were recently made in the national committee meeting in New York, though most were purely technical. The outstanding alterations were:

1—A reversal of last year's rule concerning out-of-bounds balls. This season the last man to touch an in-play ball will be charged with making it go out, though he may be standing on the boundary line or even outside the court.

2—A substitute during the 1940-41 season may enter a game only when there is a dead ball or time-out, or after being signalled to enter by the referee.

3—Two free throws must be given a player—even if he makes a basket—when he is "handled roughly, deliberately fouled or fouled in the rear."

4—A difference in the extra-period plan of all high school games. Instead of a "sudden death" period of three minutes, during which the first team to score two points wins, to decide a game which is deadlocked at the end of regulation time, there will be a full three-minute extra period. If, however, at the end of that time the teams are still tied, the "sudden death" plan will be used.

Other minor changes were: The legalization of a convex backboard; a demand on referees to hand instead of throw an out-of-bounds ball to the player awarded it; an alteration in the score of forfeit games to make it stand as it reads when hostilities end instead of 2-0.

Leading discussion of the changes were Dallas Shirley, officer of the D. C. Approved Board, and Allen Taylor.

Harry Palmer Is Named 'Y' Swimming Captain

Harry Palmer, Middle Atlantic 220-yard free style champion, will captain the senior swimming team of the Y. M. C. A. this season, having been elected to the post at the "Y's" recent dinner meeting. Harold Hines will be the second representative of National Athletic Council of the Y. M. C. A.

Dell Wins Fight

New Britain, Conn., Dec. 6 (AP).—Carl Dell, New York welterweight, weathered a badly cut right eye in the first round to gain a ten-round decision over Ernest (Cat) Robinson, of Jamica, Long Island, in the feature bout of a fight card at the Stanley Arena tonight.

the junior circuit was the Boston Red Sox sale of two second line pitchers, Dennis Galehouse and Fritz Ostermueller, to the St. Louis Browns.

The Detroit Tigers, who in the past have been active dealers, now are helpless and Manager Del Baker wandered around the lobbies here looking pathetic over having nothing to do.

The situation was sufficiently serious that rumors were around that the restriction on trading by the pennant winner might be lifted when the American League meets in Chicago starting next Tuesday.

Baker said he wasn't very hopeful and McCarthy said he hadn't heard anything of such a move, but said the position of the Yankees toward the rule was a well-known negative.

Reassemble at Chicago

If the rule is not removed next week the reason probably will be that some of the clubs, in the spirit of fair play, feel the teams that legislated the Yankees out of the world championship now should suffer the same restrictions.

There may be some other trading at Chicago. The baseball people scattered to their homes today, or advanced on to Chicago, and the fact that they were all going to get together again may have caused some deals to be left hanging over the week-end.

The closing business session of the minors' convention was devoted to reconsideration of handling players drafted for Army service.

Seek Uniform Rule

The national association yesterday had passed an amendment to its rules providing players drafted would automatically be placed on the voluntarily retired list, but today this action was withdrawn and a committee headed by President William G. Bramham was named to confer with Commissioner K. M. Landis and the major leagues in Chicago next week.

At that time a uniform rule for both majors and minors will be worked out, probably providing for the refunding of the purchase price of ball players who are taken into the service shortly after reporting to a different club.

Dallas Makes Deal For Keystoner, Pitcher

Atlanta, Dec. 6 (AP).—Dallas of the Texas League announced today the purchase of two players and a trade which sends Shortstop Jim Levey to Buffalo for Second Baseman Kroner and Pitcher Ogiego.

Bobby Dews, a young catcher, was obtained from Gadsden, of the Southeastern League. Southpaw Hurler Floyd Isekite was brought from Tacoma, of the Western International League, which he led with 16 wins and 9 losses last year.

Coach Defends College Grid At National A.A.U. Convention

By the Associated Press

Denver, Dec. 6.—Harry Hughes, gridiron coach at Colorado State College for 30 years, told the National A. A. U. convention today, "college football is a very healthy individual that right now has a slight cold."

His address followed by a day the comment of basketball Coach F. C. (Phog) Allen of Kansas that "football is on the way out."

Hughes mentioned no names but said he would "like to speak a word for football," adding:

"With proper doctoring of this slight cold, football can go right on as long as we want it."

He said athletic heads "should see that they don't pay too much attention to the glamour side." Football, he added, "should serve youth and serve the masses."

Taylor Rides Triple; Roman Boy Wins at Charles Town

Kelly Astride John Davis Purse Victor

5,000 Fans View Turf Card; O Play Installed Favorite; Ballyhaunis Wins

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 6.—Jockey W. L. Taylor and P. H. Falconer's Roman Boy were the heroes of today's racing here, but they did not work together. Taylor, now the leading rider at the meeting, turned in three sparkling saddle exhibitions to win as many races while Roman Boy, going his favorite distance, won the John Davis Purse, featuring the card.

Taylor's success came in the third, fourth and seventh races. Roman Boy did his stuff, with Jockey Willie Kelly in the saddle, in the sixth event.

O Play Choice

The crowd of 5,000 installed O Play, a good big-track performer owned by J. Brandner, the favorite in the field of eight. However, those who know their Charles Town horses stuck to Roman Boy, and the 4-year-old led every jump of the way over the 4½-furlong course. Despite the fact that he ran out at the stretch turn, Roman Boy won by 2½ lengths and was clocked in :49 3-5, a figure only three-fifths above the record for the route set by Irene's Bob.

Roman Boy handled his 120-pound assignment well. Kelly had him away on top and it was simply a case of no catchers. He got a bit out of Kelly's control at the final bend but the boy soon straightened him and was kicking and booting at the finish. This was his second winner of the day.

After three days of the big freeze here, the weather man turned in a day that was ideal for the sport. The temperature, while not of Miami proportions, was comfortable and a warm sun was at work throughout the day.

Ballyhaunis Wins

A large portion of the crowd had the right daily double. The combination was that of No. 3 and No. 2 and was the work of J. V. Stewart's Ballyhaunis, winner of the second race, and C. S. Fleischmann's Callao, winner of the third race.

Jockey Buddy Root, head of the Jockeys' Guild here, rode Ballyhaunis home to an easy victory over Scottie and Delhi Den. He took the daughter of Woodcraft to the front going to the first turn and kept her there, winning easily. W. L. Taylor drew into the lead over the jockey field here by winning with Callao. The Trace Call gelding ran out at every turn, but was good enough to win by a length and a half from Balkanese and Prairie Man. The double paid $17.40.

Dr. Parshall Is Dethroned As Trot 'King'

Ranking Reinsman Finishes Second to Harry Fitzpatrick

By the Associated Press

Goshen, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Dr. H. M. Parshall of Urbana, Ohio, the Nation's ranking driver of trotters and pacers since 1929, finally was dethroned during 1940 when he finished second to Harry Fitzpatrick of Springfield, Ill.

Statistics released today by the United States Trotting Association showed that Fitzpatrick, doing most of his campaigning in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Kentucky, won 48 races. Parshall, the Grand Circuit's top reinsman, trailed by nine.

Fitzpatrick, whose best performer was Hi Pat, 2:00, also topped Parshall in number of heat victories, 125 to 116

Parshall, however, retained his position as the top money winning driver. His horses won over $47,000, topping the $43,982 of his nearest rival, Fred Egan of Lexington, Ky. The greater part of Egan's winnings were earned by Spencer Scott, victor in the Hambletonian and six other races.

Homer B. Biery's Butler, Pa., stable, which sometimes raced in two sections, headed the list of owners with 68 triumphs, 13 of them by Little Pat, 1:58¾ pacer.

Social Security Data Indicate Sharp Job Rise

3,000,000 More Cards In 'Active File' Than Total of Last Year

The Social Security Board in Baltimore is receiving wage reports on about 3,000,000 more employes now than it was a year ago, it was learned here yesterday.

T. A. McDonald, assistant chief of operations, said the "active file" totaled about 35,000,000 cards, compared with about 32,000,000 12 months ago, indicating extensive employment in private industry during 1940.

He said accounts were termed "active" when wages were reported by employers each quarter. Altogether, the board has set up about 51,000,000 wage accounts, including several million persons currently unemployed or now working in "uncovered" jobs.

Most of the 1940 increase in "actives" came in the last two quarters, McDonald added, reflecting employment increases under the national defense program.

Social security statistics reflect conditions in business and industry but not in agriculture, domestic service, or State, Federal or local governments.

O'Donnell Elected Official

James O'Donnell, jr., has been elected secretary-treasurer of the National Mortgage and Investment Corporation, of Washington, President Joseph B. Schaaff announced yesterday. Mr. O'Donnell succeeds Col. M. C. Buckey, who died several months ago.

Directors of the mortgage firm have declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the accumulated preferred stock, payable December 16 to record December 6. Together with the 20-cent dividend paid in June, the latest disbursement makes up the 5 per cent dividend for the year.

Routine work and reception of committee reports yesterday occupied the board of governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers, in session here. A detailed report of the association's securities act committee, which is discussing possible modifications of the Securities Act with the SEC, was approved after discussion.

A tentative draft of uniform practice standards to govern counter trading in the entire Nation was discussed by the board. Final action, however, was postponed pending further study of the subject by association experts.

PCA Sets Traffic Record

A 51.26 per cent increase in revenue passengers carried and a 55.90 per cent gain in revenue passenger miles flown were realized by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines last month over November of 1939, it was reported yesterday by Edward Sullivan, general traffic manager. Last month's traffic marked the best November in R.C.A.'s history, and was the twenty-ninth month that the airline's traffic has shown a substantial increase over the corresponding month for the preceding year.

The Washington station of R. C. A. reported a 64 per cent gain in traffic during November, as compared with the same month last year.

Bank Dividend Voted

Directors of The Second National Bank declared the semi-annual installment of its 6 per cent per annum dividend to stockholders of record December 20. The dividend will be disbursed on December 31. At the same meeting this week the surplus account was order increased by $25,000.

Directors recently awarded a bonus of three-quarters of a month's salary to al lemployes who have been in service for at least one year.

N. I. C. Parley to Open

Two Washington trade association executives will preside over sessions of the National Industrial Council meeting in New York next week, it was announced here yesterday by the National Association of Manufacturers, sponsors of the meeting.

Charles J. Brand, executive secretary of the National Fertilizer Association, and V. P. Ahearn, executive secretary of the National Sand and Gravel Association, both with headquarters in Washington, will take leading parts in the program beginning Monday.

Mr. Brand will preside at the opening session and Mr. Ahearn at one of the sessions on Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting of the N. I. C. is a prelude to the annual Congress of American Industry, also sponsored by the N. A. M. Two hundred or more trade association executives from all parts of the country are expected to attend the N. I. C. meeting.

Kresge Sales Rise 8.3% in November

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—S. S. Kresge Co., operators of a national chain of variety stores, today reported November sales increased to $14,179,322 from $13,087,690 a year ago, a gain of 8.3 per cent. Sales for the first 11 months of 1940 totaled $131,798,910, up 3.9 per cent from $126,850,113 in the comparable 1939 period.

Boston Wool

Boston, Dec. 6 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Only an occasional sale being closed in domestic wools on the Boston market today, and deals were of very limited volume. Prices appeared to be steady on fine and ¼-blood grades. Sentiment was inclined to weaken slightly on ⅜ and ½-blood domestic wools because of the lack of demand and the pressure from South American wools, which have been arriving in large quantities during the past few weeks.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Business in print and broadcloth items was quiet today. Large buyers of woolen piece goods despaired of acquiring cloth for spot and nearby delivery in the open market and sought to satisfy pressing requirements through jobbers.

Rayons were generally quiet, with better demand for combination yarn goods especially two-ply alpaca. Silk goods were sluggish at unchanged prices.

Sales were reported on the basis of the following quotations for immediate delivery: Print cloths, 38½, 64x60s, 8.35, 5½; broad cloths, 87, 100x60, 4.10, 7½; sheetings, 37, 48x48, 4.00, 8½@6½; combed lawns, 46, 76x72, 9.00, 7.

Month's Steel Output Near All-Time Top

6,282,824 Tons Produced, Second Best in History

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 6.—Steel ingot production in November totaled 6,282,824 tons, the second largest monthly output in history, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

The outturn was equivalent to 96.49 per cent of the steel industry's capacity. That production fell a little short of October's record of 6,461,898 tons which was accounted for in part, said the institute, by the fact that November was a shorter month, but the average rate of operations in November topped the preceding month's 96.10 per cent of capacity.

In November, 1939, the peak month for that year, the industry produced 6,147,783 tons.

In the month just closed an average of 1,464,528 tons of ingots was produced weekly against 1,458,668 for October and 1,433,050 for November last year.

Cotton Futures

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—A steady stream of buying orders from mill interests and trade shorts lifted cotton futures 2 to 6 points today.

Demand, prompted by quick stoppage of 14 additional notices against December contracts and a steady tone to securities, was broad enough to absorb limited Southern and hedge selling.

Selling was influenced in part by another increase in stocks of cotton certified for delivery on futures contracts.

A lessening of spot interests, for instance, sold several thousand bales of March above 10¼ cents a pound.

Traders noted that export of 15,185 bales to Russia during the week swelled to 114,649 bales shipments to the Soviets thus far in the season.

Worth Street reported lagging demand for heavier industrial constructions as well as prints and broadcloths.

Exports Thursday, 17,620 bales; season so far, 512,182. Port receipts 89,123. Port stocks, 3,290,631.

Minor Decline Seen in Week's Auto Output

124,790 Units Put Out In Period Against 128,783 Last Week

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Dec. 6.—A slight tapering off in car and truck production was reported by Ward's Reports, Inc., today in its weekly survey of automobile factory activity.

Estimating this week's assemblies at 124,790 cars and trucks compared with 128,783 last week and 115,488 this week a year ago, Ward's said that "virtually all manufacturers have reached the peaks of their fourth quarter output quotas."

It added that although most producers will continue their manufacturing steady at topmost levels of the year, minor taperings in others would cause a slow reduction of the industry-wide operations in forthcoming weeks.

The company's retail sales during October of this year numbered 99,822 units.

Pontiac Has 23.4% Gain

Pontiac, Mich., Dec. 6 (AP).—Pontiac division of General Motors Corporation reported today that its retail deliveries for November aggregated 26,629 units, an increase of 23.4 per cent over November, 1939.

Retail sales for the final 10 days of last month numbered 8,859. In the preceding 10-day period they totaled 9,249.

Oldsmobile Sets Record

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 6 (AP).—Oldsmobile division of General Motors today reported its retail sales of new cars for the month of November totaled 22,258 units, described as the biggest volume of any single month since May, 1937.

Of the total reported 7,296 units were delivered during the final 10-day period of November.

D. E. Ralston, general sales manager, said retail sales for the first 11 months of this year numbered 183,943 units. In the like period last year deliveries totaled 132,115.

Utility to Double Size Of New Power Plant

St. Louis, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Union Electric Co. of Missouri announced today it would spend an additional $7,500,000 to double the size of a new power plant under construction at Venice, Ill.

Two 40,000-kilowatt turbo-generator units, costing $11,500,000, including transmission facilities, now are being rushed to completion at the plant and will be in operation next fall.

The decision to erect another 80,000-kilowatt unit was reached because of prospective increases in power consumption due to the national defense program, coupled with a surge in industrial activity resulting in a record output of electric energy in November.

Stocks Move Narrowly, End Little Changed; Selected Steels and Rails Show Slight Gain

New York, Dec. 6.—Stocks again were unable to establish a definite trend in today's market. A number of gains ran to a point or so, but there were about as many losses of as much. The majority of price variations, however, were in small fractions and a wide assortment of issues finished where they left off yesterday.

Selected steels, mail orders, rails and specialties were among the best performers. Motors, rubbers, coppers and utilities got nowhere.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 43.3. Transfers aggregated 535,560 shares against 598,600 the day before.

Further year-end tax selling, fears of the effects of 1941 tax boosts on corporation profits and lack of inspring news from European war fronts, brokers said, served to chill speculative temperaments despite the generally hopeful character of domestic business.

Among stocks ending on the upside were U. S. Steel, eBthlehem, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, American Telephone, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, Du Pont, American Can, American Woolen preferred, J. I. Case and Johns-Manville.

Lehigh Valley Coal was the liveliest mover for the second day in a row. It opened on a block of 15,000 shares at ½, duplicating its low for 1940 established in the preceding session. It emerged with a net gain of ⅛.

General Motors and Chrysler finished all even notwithstanding reports of heavy motor sales in November. Ward's, however, estimated a let-down in this week's automotive output and predicted a tapering off would be witnessed in forthcoming weeks.

American Tobacco "B" dipped to a new bottom for the year. Other losers included American Smelting, Douglas Aircraft, Loft, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber, Western Union and Kennecott.

Cheerful items included another jump in this week's retail spending over a year ago, an optimistic view of Christmas shopping by the Federal Reserve Board, expectations steel mill operations next week would hold at the current peak, estimates railway net income for the year would exceed 1939 by 75 per cent, and a compilation placing November heavy building awards at the largest for this month on record.

Modest advances in the curb were registered for Bath Iron Works, American Cyanamid "B," Creole Petroleum and N. J. Zinc. On the losing end were Aluminum, Ltd., American Gas, Gulf Oil and Humble Oil. Volume here was around 167,000 shares, compared with 145,000 Thursday.

Bonds started with a preponderance of gains today and held the good form to the end. Rail and utility issues vied for the attention of buyers and both groups accounted for many advances of fractions or more. The Associated Press averages were modestly higher.

Wide prominence given to remarks by Jesse Jones at an insurance convention yesterday that federal authorities were considering a cut in the interest rate on Government loans to railroads tended to stimulate demand for certain of the carrier liens.

In railroad lending so far the Government has charged 4 per cent. It was figured that roads heavily in debt to the Federal Treasury would benefit considerably from any paring of the interesting rate.

Final gains from fractions to around 2 points for Missouri Pacific "F" 5s of '77 at 19¼, Southern Railway 4s at 56, International Telephone 4½s at 26, Great Northern 5½s at 108, Chicago& Eastern Illinois 5s at 15¼ and Rock Island General 4s of '88 at 12¾.

United States Governments drifted down a little from the week's peak levels.

Transactions totaled $9,070,700, face value, the largest since November 28, against $7,945,000 Thursday.

Republic Steel Constructs New Cold Strip Mill

Warren, Ohio, Dec. 6 (AP).—Capacity for production of cold strip steel at the Republic Steel Corporation plant here will be increased nearly 50,000 tons annually, the company announced today.

A new cold strip mill, expected to go into service next spring, will replace two high mills which have become obsolete. The new plant, rolling cold strip up to 18-inch widths, will be of the three-stand, four-high type—that is, having three sets of four rollers, two rollers in tandem below the steel and two in tandem above.

In addition to the finishing mill, Republic is installing in Warren a two-high temper mill and an improved gang slitter.

The company declined to estimate the cost of the improvements.

Canton, Ohio, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Timken Roller Bearing Co. announced yesterday that a $3,000,000 expansion program designed primarily to meet increased defense requirements, is under way in four Ohio plants, located here, in nearby Gambrinus, Columbus and Mount Vernon.

Sugar Futures

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Gains of 1 to 3 points in domestic sugar futures today reflected the desire of traders to be covered in the event of a week-end quota announcement. A firm actuals markets also encouraged buying. Sales totaled 7,130 tons.

The theory that Great Britain might come back into the raw market encouraged modest demand for world futures. Final prices were unchanged to 1½ points up on turnover of 2,550 tons; March, *3.76½; May, *3.79.

Sale of 1,000 tons of Philippines raws for January arrival was reported at 2.87 cents a pound. Other Philippines were held at 2.90. Interest in current quota sugar hovered around 2.97.

Refined was unchanged locally at 4.35 cents.

The Securities Commission began a proceeding yesterday to determine whether it must require corporate simplification of the United Light & Power Co. system under the Holding Company Act.

United Light & Power, with headquarters in Chicago, has a system embracing 52 companies, including seven registered holding companies, and operates gas and electric utilities in 14 States. It has gross assets of around $600,000,000.

Hearing was set for January 14 and will be consolidated with a hearing on the company's application for approval of a plan of recapitulation and simplification.

The section of the law under which the action was taken is a companion to the "death sentence" clause covering geographical integration. It requires the elimination of "great-grandfathers" from holding company systems—that is, the elimination of one tier in a corporate set-up having three tiers or more—and makes provision for "fair and equitable distribution of voting power."

Grains Slump On December Corn Break

Heavy Deliveries Blamed for Swift Drop in Futures

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 6.—December corn fell about 2 cents, prices in the spot market were 1 to 2½ cents lower, and values of all other grains sagged in sympathy with weakness of the principal feed cereal.

Corn closed ⅝-1⅞ lower than yesterday, December 59½-⅝, May 59⅝-¾. Wheat was 1-1½ lower, December 89, May 85⅝-½; oats ½-1⅛ off; soy beans ⅝- 1½ lower; rye 1-1½ down and lard 8 lower to 2 higher.

Weakness of corn was blamed on reports of increased country selling and receipts at various markets. Chicago receipts were around 200 cars and, although dealers sold 130,000 bushels to shippers, bookings to arrive increased to 58,000 bushels. No. 2 yellow corn was priced at 62½-¾ in the spot market.

Receipts at the 12 principal interior terminals totaled 1,183,000 bushels, compared with 681,000 a week ago and 950,000 a year ago.

James E. Bennett & Co., grain firm, received word from Kansas City that dealers there were offered a substantial volume and Omaha reports that more than half the receipts consisted of "free" corn. Some processors said recent heavy liquidation of swine on an unprecedented scale for this time of year may lead to reduced farm feeding demand. They blamed increased selling of hogs, which consume a large part of the corn supply, partly on an unfavorable relationship between corn and hog prices, with the former supported by the Government loan

N. Y. Firm Low In Scott Circle Underpass Bids

The Cayuga Construction Co. of New York City yesterday submitted the lowest bid to construct the Scott Circle underpass in line with Sixteenth Street. The bid was $312,544.

Leo Butler Co., of Silver Spring, Md., was the only local bidder. This company placed the second low bid with a price of $321,608. Seven other bids were submitted, all being over the estimated cost of $345,000. Bids for the paving of approaches for the tunnel will be opened next Monday.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said he expected work would be begun about the first of the year with eight months the completion time. As in the case of the Thomas Circle, the contractor will have to move the statue of Gen. Winfield Scott, located in the center of the circle.

Washington Monument Story To Be Dramatized

A broadcast by students of Anacostia High School will feature the "Heroes of Democracy" program today at 1:30 p. m. sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. It will dramatize the story of the Washington Monument.

The cast will include Doris Kyle, Margaret Wilson, Lorraine Buscher, John Douglas, Arnold Michael, Ira Breiterman, Dan Margolis and Edward Markham. Miss Agnes K. Tweedie is director.

Music will be presented by the Anacostia High School Band, directed by Capt. L. E. Manoly, and the school chorus, directed by Miss Eva Henderson. Mrs. Lillian Brousseau will accompany the choral numbers.

9:15 a. m., WRC—Mary Mason is honored on her fifth anniversary as director of WRC's Home Forum, contrary to reports in last Sunday's Post, which had it earlier. 1:55, WMAL—The Metropolitan Opera air season opens in democratic splendor. Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" is the choice, with Elisabeth Rethberg, John Brownlee, Ezio Pinza, Licia Albanese and Jarmila Novotna. Intermission doings are impressive: Herbert Hoover, Edward Johnson, Lucrezia Bori, Mrs. August Belmont, Lawrence Tibbett, Gladys Swarthout and Olin Downs, not in the order named.

3:00, WJSV—This city hears last Tuesday's Invitation to Learning via transcription. Henry Adams' autobiography, "The Education of Henry Adams," is the subject.

5:35, WMAL—Notre Dame-Southern California football game.

7:00, WJSV—Financial aid to Great Britain is a question that has been much in public print this week. The People's Platform gathers four Chicagoans—two experts and two laymen—to give their views.

8:00, WOL—Senator William H. King of Utah joins the Baltic-American Society in tribute to Jan Sibelius on the composer's birthday anniversary.

9:35 WMAL—Arturo Toscanini has recovered from his recent indisposition to lead an all-Sibelius program on the seventy-fifth birthday of the Finnish composer: Symphony No. 2 in D; "The Swan of Tuonela"; "Pohjola's Daughter," and "Finlandia."

From the hand of Barry Blake, WJSV's production and general handy man, comes a note today notifying us that tomorrow's the day for the start of WJSV's annual dramatic competition.

In what sounds like an auspicious start, the Interior Department Players, directed by Joe Bly, are to present over the station at 1:30 p. m. Mr. Bly's original playlet entitled "Public Futilities." For the inner meaning behind the title, you'll have to listen in because Mr. Blake failed to expand it in his note.

That play will be only the beginning, ladies and gentlemen, of the series which will last throughout the winter and spring and in which practically all Washington's dramatic groups will participate.

Again this year, as last, WJSV will present a fine, capacious silver cup, inscribed in the fashion known as suitably, to the group which in the opinion of a fine, formidable set of judges presents the best radio production.

Those judges will be five dramatic instructors from five of Washington's universities and five Washington newspaper dramatic critics. An award, in addition to the cup, will be made this year to the Washington man or woman who submits the best script for radio, whether or not it's presented during the series.

Last year's trophy went to the Pierce Hall Players for their interpretation of an original play called "Cyclorama" by Paul Alexander.

Contract Bridge

Today's hand offers an interesting problem to a declarer eager to safeguard his contract. South is the declarer at three no trump. West leads his fourth-best spade; East puts up the queen and declarer takes with the king. How should declarer play for the maximum safety from here on? Plan your campaign then check with the solution below.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 9653 ♡ 8 6 4 ♢ A K Q 7 3 2 ♣ None
WEST: ♠ A 10 8 7 ♡ 10 3 ♢ 10 9 8 5 ♣ K 9 8
EAST: ♠ Q 4 2 ♡ Q J 9 7 ♢ J ♣ J 10 7 4 2
SOUTH: ♠ K J ♡ A K 5 2 ♢ 6 4 ♣ A Q 6 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♢	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 7 ♠.

Declarer does not have to worry about the spade suit, as his jack, combined with dummy's guarded nine, will afford another stopper. But if he is both wise and cautious he'll guard against a bad diamond distribution, as he must bring in five tricks in the suit to insure his contract. He can count on two hearts, one club and the spade already won. Relying upon a 3-2 division most players would simply run the diamonds and hope for the best, but more canny declarers would consider dummy's abnormal distribution and prepare for a dangerous 4-1 split.

Expecting trouble, declarer leads a low diamond at the second trick and ducks, letting East win. East will return a spade, the defense winning two spade tricks, but declarer can stop the next round and run his diamonds for a safe nine tricks.

Such precaution might not be taken at a match-point duplicate game where extra tricks count so heavily, but at cumulative score duplicate or rubber bridge the safety play should definitely be made.
